Bewildered Wall Street
What About Russia?
What, No Prisons?
Woman's Day

—By Arthur Brisbane—

WALL STREET recalls the bewildered Canadian lady who used to say, "I tell my husband I don't know what to tell him."

Wall Street doesn't know what to tell the speculators. Yesterday American Telephone and Telegraph declared the regular dividend at the rate of 9 per cent, and instead of going up the market went down. Wall Street is as difficult as the watch belonging to the dormouse at the Mad Hatter's tea party. The dormouse said he put the best butter in his watch, "but nothing seems to please it."

The New York Evening Journal says Gov. Roosevelt is seriously considering "the advisability of recognizing Russia's government"—after March 4.

Russia has always been friendly to this country. And it is not the business of the United States to tell Russia what kind of government she must have. We don't like their kind, they don't like ours.

But there is no reason why we should be rude or silly about it.

There is business to be done in Russia and there will be more business later, for the Russians are not failing in accordance with the predictions of our "best minds."

Russia has said unpleasant things about us, but we have said worse things about Russia. We need business, and Russia has it. That is the main thing, and if we could recognize the brutalities of czardom, why not Sovietism?

Deeds, not words, distinguish the Russians. The other day 25,000 Moscow white collar workers were put to work on farms, to teach them EFFICIENCY.

Now the Soviet government rules that any worker who "loafs one work day a month" shall be discharged.

It would surprise 12,000,000 Americans looking for jobs to hear that this severity is made necessary by Russia's shortness of labor. There are jobs for everybody, even women and children.

Gov. Roosevelt, laid up with a slight attack of flu, is working on his first United States budget in bed and will soon be talking to President Hoover about those European debts, which we shall probably NOT collect.

If we are not to get that money it will be well for Congress to know it and not casually add to next year's budget one hunderd and fifty millions of dollars that taxpayers will have to produce when Europe refuses to do so.

The next few lines will interest Europe, and amuse "I told you so" wets, who said prohibition wouldn't work. The Attorney-General announces that, in view of the "wet vote," he will not ask for money to build more federal prisons.

All the United States jails were overflowing with BOOTLEGGERS AND THEIR EMPLOYES, and more were to be built at once.

The Attorney-General thinks they won't be needed now, which will surprise sincere prohibitionists, who believed that prohibition would empty jails, insane asylums and poor houses.

This is woman's day, and as Mrs. Eddy said when this writer interviewed her long ago, "It is the day of mind over matter."

Amy Johnson Mollinson, who recently married the British flier holding the record from London to South Africa, has just beaten her distinguished husband's record across the Desert of Sahara.

She made a hop from Oran in Algeria to Garo, 1400 miles further south, in 13 hours and a few minutes.

The British Empire may be tottering, but English girls are not tottering.

Ida M. Tarbell, writing in December Cosmopolitan Magazine, asks, "What is the matter with the country? Has our plan failed?" Nobody seems able to answer the first question.

Our plan hasn't failed, of course, perhaps because we haven't any definite plan, although Miss Tarbell says we have a plan just as definite as that of Russia. Her article is encouraging. She reminds you that when this government was established it had fewer than 4,000,000 people, and there wasn't enough money in the Treasury to pay soldiers who fought against England. She might have added that only one mechanic, a New England carpenter, was able to earn one dollar a day, all year round.

The latest killing in a New York gambling resort would interest Bret Harte, who invented the finest gambler in literature. The corpse of Gerald Nigro was picked up amid chairs and tables overturned, playing cards strewn everywhere, and two deuces and two treys were found in the dead man's vest pocket.

It is dangerous to carry extra deuces and treys in a game in which both sometimes are "wild" and as valuable as aces.

2 Hunted in Bombing Laid to Rum War

Two East Boston youths were being sought today in connection with the attempted destruction by bombing of an empty Chelsea st. house early today in what police claim is a bootleg war.

The first floor of the two-story building is occupied by a store, owned by Constantine DeLuca, who lives in a neighboring house. The upper floor is vacant. DeLuca was once convicted in East Boston court of liquor selling.

Police said they had learned that a bootleg war in the section had ended in price cutting and that the bombing could probably be traced to this.

Residents of the neighborhood were excited by the partial explosion of the bomb, which was crudely manufactured and set off in amateur fashion. Those who heard the explosion said it resembled rifle fire. The house was filled with smoke and was first thought to be afire.

Police at the East Boston station were notified of the explosion and Sergt. Edmund Gallahue and six men rushed to the scene armed with riot guns. They broke into the building and discovered the partially exploded bomb on the first floor. Police said the premises were formerly occupied by a speakeasy.

DeLuca said today that a friend from the North End called on him last night and warned him that an attempt would be made to wreck his home.

"They picked out the store instead," DeLuca said. "Two months ago I came home from a prize fight late at night and I saw two men in a car in front of the store but I didn't think much of it. Next morning I found a ladder up to a window in back and in one room was an alcohol can filled with turpentine and the walls had been sprinkled with gasoline.

"I think the same two fellows did this—but I'll settle the score in my own way."

The bomb was taken to Station 7 by Sergt. Gallahue and immersed in a tub of water. Capt. Charles A. Van Amburgh, State firearms and explosives expert, was notified and will aid the police investigation today.

Broker Head of Swindle Plot

WOOL MAN IS MULCTED OF $500,000

Details of How Wealthy Vermonter Was Robbed in a Land Deal Revealed

Details concerning the mulcting of $500,000 from T. Edouard Jackson, retired wool dealer of Vermont, were revealed by the authorities today, showing that the trap was set and sprung on the wealthy merchant in Boston.

The swindling of Jackson in a deal involving Florida land was revealed exclusively by the Boston Evening American yesterday.

The authorities had come across it in their investigation of the affairs of Ralph J. Code of Dorchester, alleged swindler of certain other individuals in a $7,000,000 "buried treasure" scheme. The investigators do not link Code with the Jackson case.

Jackson, it was revealed today, had done business with a certain broker who was not as honest as the retired merchant thought.

This broker, knowing that his former client had setled down for a quiet life in the Vermont hills with a large amount of money lying idle in the bank, telephoned to Jackson asking him if he could come to Boston.

MEETS THE "CLIPPER"

"I have just stumbled on to an excellent proposition," said the broker.

"Well, Iam very busy," replied Jackson. "Cannot we postpone it two or three days?"

"I'm afraid not," was the answer. "I just happened to run into the man who holds the keys to this proposition and he's impatient to get back to Florida."

Jackson left home that night and was met at the North Station the next morning by the broker who took him to a downtown hotel. There Jackson was introduced to another member of the swindle ring who was to play the part known in the underworld as "the clipper."

BUYS 35 PER CENT

Before night came Jackson had sat in a conference with thee or four others in an office which the "clipper" had opened in Tremont st., had purchased 35 per cent of the stock of the realty corporation and had been elected vice-president.

As a courtesy he was then appointed manager of the Boston office with a secretary to do the actual work. The rest left for New York. For three weeks thereafter, messages were exchanged between Boston, New York and Florida, but these suddenly ended after Jackson had completed his investment.

The Boston secretary dropped from sight and the $500,000 was gone the way of a lot more good money in "gilt edge" investment schemes. Incidentally, the authorities learned that the "cliper" had himself been "clipped," getting only a few hundred dollars for his leading part in the fraud.

The authorities have also discovered that the alleged gold bullion scheme which Code is supposed to have broached to his "victims" had its counterpart in a gigantic silver swindle in England three years ago.

LIKE BRITISH SCHEME

Code allegedly told of a rum ship off Nova Scotia with $7,000,000 in British gold aboard, and the London scheme had it that a vessel with $25,000,000 in Mexican silver was off Helgoland. A judge and other prominent men were defrauded in that scheme.

The authorities have, however, definitely established that Code had no part in the English fraud, nor is he George F. Shurtleff, who was sentenced in New York in 1930 in connection with the copper stock swindle of John and Herbert Locke. Reports from New York stated erroneously that Shurtleff and Code were the same man.

HULTMAN BAR ON 8 FOR CAPTAINS

350 Police Face Shift in New Shakeup; Promotions for Few; Curley Explains

Police headquarters and all the stations were buzzing with speculation and talk of drastic changes today as a result of Mayor Curley's sudden retirement of four captains and 10 other veterans, coupled with reports that Commissioner Hultman would soon transfer no less than 350 patrolmen and sergeants.

The situation, which already had the rank and file of the force commenting, guessing and listening eagerly to all sorts of wild rumors, was further confused by disclosure that no captains will be appointed at present to fill the eight vacancies.

This means that Commissioner Hultman is adamant in his unwillingness to make appointments of captain from the present civil service list.

It also means that lieutenants will have to take charge of some of the stations, thus altering the traditional structure of the departmental organization.

"FEW" PROMOTIONS DUE

Commissioner Hultman said today that there would be no "shakeup" in the department as a result of the retirements, but the understanding in the department is that the transfer of 350 men among the various divisions has been scheduled for some time.

Hultman also said there would be "a few promotions Thanksgiving," and this was taken to indicate that he would promote sergeants to lieutenants to fill vacancies. While he did not say so it was made clear that he would appoint no captains.

The mayor's action in suddenly signing the retirement papers of such men as Capt. James Laffey,

STROUT FREED IN BANK TRIAL

Charles B. Strout, president of the closed Industrial Bank & Trust Co., won acquittal today in superior court in the first attempt of the government to convict nearly a score of defendants in connection with the bank's affairs.

More than 600 indictments were returned against the defendants some weeks ago and Strout was placed on trial first electing to be heard in a jury-waived session.

Trial was brief, only one prosecution witness, an assistant bank examiner being heard. No defence was put in, Atty. John H. Backus arguing successfully that Strout was not guilty of the charge of certifying a check when there were insufficient funds on deposit to the drawer's account.

In finding Strout not guilty Judge Cox declared the evidence showed that a loan of $2500 to the General Management Corporation had been made and credited on that concern's account, protecting the check and the bank.

CURLEY DENIES JOB REPORT

Mayor Curley today denied that he is a candidate for the position of assistant secretary of the treasury, as reported in a Boston newspaper, other than the Boston Evening American.

In a prepared statement, the mayor attacked the sincerity of so-called friends who were reported urging, without authorization, consideration of him for the position. Mayor Curley charged that these proponents were "friendly enemies."

"The statement appearing in a Boston newspaper to the effect that friends of mine are urging me for the position of assistant secretary of the treasury is absolutely untrue," the mayor's statement reads. "I am not a candidate for this position and have not authorized the use of my name in connection with this or any other position.

"The unauthorized statements or announcements of this character are usually made with a definite purpose in view; namely, the injury of the person whom they purport they are desirous of benefiting."

ROOSEVELT IN DEBT PARLEY TUESDAY

Phone Hoover Hour of His Arrival as U. S. Delays the Reply; Congress Firm

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—President-elect Roosevelt today informed President Hoover by long-distance telephone he would arrive at 3:30 Tuesday afternoon and go directly to the White House for discussion of war debts.

A short while before the phone call came, the French and Belgian ambassadors had been informed at the State Department that this government was not ready to reply to petitions from their governments for extension of the moratorium and further debt revision.

Mr. Hoover spoke with his successor-elect from his desk in the executive offices.

DEBTS, ARMS, ECONOMIES

It is planned the two leaders will confer on debts, world armaments and economic affairs in the executive offices.

The parley, however, might extend into conversation in the Lincoln study on the second floor of the White House proper.

Although no definite information was available, a White House secretary said he did not believe the conference would last many hours.

At the Capitol, meanwhile, war debts remained an animated topic among the members of Congress who are returning rapidly. Rep. McFadden (R., Pa.) told reporters:

"I do not see how any one could expect Congress to approve any further change in the present debt agreement."

MORATORIUM OPPOSED

That position also was taken by Rep. Rainey, of Illinois, Democratic floor leader, and Rep. McReynolds (D., Tenn.), scheduled to be chairman of foreign affairs.

Any moratorium proposal, Rainey said, would "have trouble getting a single vote from the present House."

"I doubt whether it would even be brought before the House ways and means committee for consideration," he added. "That committee must approve any agreement involving debts."

McReynolds said he was opposed to any further reduction or to cancellation.

ROOSEVELT READY TO PRESS BEER LEGISLATION

EXTRA SESSION OF CONGRESS IF NECESSARY

President-elect Would Like to Have Democratic Party Get Credit for Measure

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 17 (AP)—If the Volstead law is not modified at the forthcoming short session of Congress, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President-elect, will call the national lawmakers into special session shortly after his inauguration next March and recommend enactment of beer legislation, it was indicated today by his close associates.

The President-elect, it was learned, has abandoned hope that that a modification measure will be enacted at the lame duck session. He is not worrying about it, however, his advisors say, because he would prefer to have the Democratic party get the credit for "restoring beer."

Hints have been thrown out that Mr. Roosevelt will recommend a federal tax of $8 a barrel on beer. He is known to have been advised by Speaker John N. Garner, Vice-President-elect, that such a tax would net the federal government upwards of $350,000,000 annually, which would be used to help balance the budget.

Privately, Governor Roosevelt is said to have expressed hope that when the Volstead law is modified 4 per cent beer can be provided.

Until the Eighteenth Amendment is repealed, however, it is said he does not feel there is much chance of legalizing wines because of their high alcoholic content.

Geneva, Nov. 17 (AP)—Leon Nicole, Socialist, arrested last week after fatal rioting here, started a hunger strike of protest yesterday, but changed his mind and ended the fast today.

NAHANT ARTIST ENDS LIFE

Claud C. Lyouns, 65, of Ocean st., Nahant, a magazine illustrator, was found dead from poison in his stateroom today when the steamer St. John arrived in New York from Boston.

A note in his stateroom said the artist had been despondent because of three years of unemployment and ill health, and asked that his stepson, Francis Henderson, employed by S. S. Mosley & Co., brokers, of 390 Broadway, New York, be notified.

Henderson identified the body of his stepfather, which was found in the stateroom berth after a steward unlocked the door with a pass key.

A brother-in-law of the artist, who died an apparent suicide, is Frank E. Johnson, Faneuil Hall fish dealer. Johnson said his brother-in-law had been highly successful at one time and he could not understand why the artist could not get commissions in the past few years.

Lyouns was a native of England.

FILES RESOLVE ON LAME DUCKS

Resolutions calling for the ratification by the Massachusetts Legislature of the "lame duck" amendment to the federal constitution were filed today with the clerk of the Senate by Senator-elect Owen Gallagher of Boston.

Seventeen states have so far approved the amendment which abolishes the short session of Congress, starts the term of the President on January 20 instead of March 4, and opens the Congress on January 3.

In the referendum in the recent election, ratification was approved overwhelmingly. The exact figures will not be known, however, until the vote is officially canvassed by the governor's council, starting next Tuesday.

Roosevelt to Set Precedent at Lehman's Inaugural

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 17 (AP)—For the first time, a President-elect is going to take part in New York's ancient biennial custom of formally inaugurating a governor.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, has promised to be present at the inauguration of Herbert H. Lehman.

"Sure," he said. "You bet I'm going to attend."

Three of the four Presidents who have gone from New York state to the White House have been governors, but it remains for Mr. Roosevelt to be the first present at the inaugural ceremony of his successor.

Martin Van Buren, Grover Cleveland and Theodore Roosevelt played no part in the ceremonies inducting a new governor into office after they had been named to the presidency. Millard Fillmore was never governor of New York.

New York actually inaugurates its governors twice, once privately and once publicly. This is to prevent a 12-hour period in which the state would be without an executive. In the late afternoon or evening of the last day of the year, a supreme court justice privately swears into office the governor-elect.

The office of the outgoing governor expires at midnight, Dec. 31. The new governor does not formally take his oath until noon Jan. 1.

KING DEPLORES DIFFERENCES WITH ERIN

Speech Proroguing Parliament Extols Lausanne Conference and Ottawa Pact

London, Nov. 17 (INS)—Estrangement of Great Britain and the Irish Free State, the beneficial effects of the Lausanne conference and the Ottawa imperial preference trade agreements, were alluded to by King George today in his speech proroguing Parliament.

"I regret," the kind said, "that certain questions which have arisen between the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State have not yet been found capable of adjustment."

The king expressed gratification over successful conclusion of the Ottawa conference, voicing confidence it would "strengthen the ties between my people and stimulate imperial trade."

He extolled the Lausanne Conference for "Devising conditions of a lasting settlement of the question of German reparations as an essential preliminary to the economic recovery of the world."

The speech dealt at some length with the steps taken by Prime Minister MacDonald's cabinet to balance the budget, debt conversion, import duties and aid to agriculture.

The King referred to the statute of Westminster, which accords greater measure of autonomy to the dominions and colonies, as "an act of great constitutional significance."

The speech was read to the House of Commons and the House of Lords meeting in joint session. Immediately upon its conclusion, parliament adjourned.

DRY ARRESTS NEAR MILLION

Washington, Nov. 17 (INS)—By the end of 1932, approximately a million persons will have been arrested for violation of the national prohibition law by the federal authorities, according to figures available today at the Treasury and Department of Justice.

In the 1920-32 period, sentences aggregating about 177,500 years and fines of $75,000,000 have been imposed. No record of sentences was maintained prior to 1926, but since that time. They have totaled 127,388 years.

Close to 40,000 permanent injunctions have closed properties valued at millions of dollars.

All federal prohibition enforcement, including prison and court expenses incident thereto, cost around $500,000,000.

Considering federal expenses, loss of time by those sentenced to prison, their expenses of standing trial and other incidentals, it may be estimated that prohibition has cost more than a billion dollars, exclusive of enforcement activities by states, counties and cities.

Ex-Employe Arrested in Store Larceny

Arrested by a policewoman, a Back Bay man was arraigned in municipal court today charged with larceny of $409 from a downtown store.

According to Policewoman Irene Bohmbach the man, Henry J. Walters of Huntington ave., Back Bay, is a former employe of the store. Police say that he obtained $209 of the sum by means of fraudulent refund slips. The other $200 was obtained by forging names to notes passed at the Employes' Credit Union, police charged.

Financial Outlook Called 'Encouraging'

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—Belief that the country's financial outlook is "unmistakably encouraging" was expressed by Francis H. Sissen, president of the American Bankers' Association, tonight.

Sisson, speaking at the Bankers Forum dinner, said the current situation shows a "very satisfactory" improvement over conditions of a few months ago.

Sen. Lewis to Stay in Hospital 2 Weeks

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP)—Physicians said today Senator James Hamilton Lewis would remain in Henrotin Hospital for two weeks to obtain a complete rest before Congress reassembles Dec. 4. Weakened by strenuous campaigning prior to the general election, Senator Lewis entered the hospital two weeks ago.

Thief Flees on Bicycle

San Diego, Cal., Nov. 17 (INS)—Police today sought a bandit who injected the spirit of "the gay 90's" by escaping on a bicycle after holding up two stores.

'Ham.' Fish Tells Just Why the G.O.P. Lost

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—Rep. Hamilton Fish, Jr., used some arithmetic today to explain to a meeting of the Women's National Republican Club just why, in his opinion, the Republican party was defeated in the Nov. 8 election.

"There was nothing the Republicans could have done to stave off defeat," said Mr. Fish. "President Hoover made a gallant fight, but was doomed."

He then summed up as follows what he said he believed were "the main causes" for the defeat:

50 per cent depression.

20 per cent desire of the voters for a change.

20 per cent prohibition.

5 per cent ousting of the veterans from Washington by force.

5 per cent miscellaneous.

DR. FOSTER FOR SPENDING MORE

The trouble with the United States is not so much frozen assets as frozen feet, Dr. William Trufant Foster, of Newton, told the Massachusetts School Superintendents' Association in the State House today.

Dr. Foster said that the policy of retrenchment as a cure for the depression was erroneous and that this is exactly the wrong time to cut down expenditures for education. He advocated an expansion of public works with funds provided by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and reformation of tax systems.

There are no financial wizards left, he said. The nation needs balanced budgets, of course, he added, but it also needs balanced brains to comprehend that the only rescue from depression lies in spending more money, not less.

JUDGE HINTS AT NEW WET ERA

Lawrence, Nov. 17—Judge Harry R. Dow apparently expects an early modification of the dry law.

Before him in probate court today came Edward J. O'Brien bartender, B. P., but now out of work, on a contempt petition of his wife, Mrs. Nellie F. O'Brien of East st., Methuen. Twenty-eight years ago, [illegible] Mrs. O'Brien, court ordered Mr. O'Brien to pay her $5 weekly and he is now $400 behind.

"I'll continue the case indefinitely," said Judge Dow, addressing O'Brien. "You may get work at your old trade soon."

Food Prices Up Over September Cost

Washington, Nov. 17 (INS)—For the first time in months the retail cost of food in 51 principal cities showed an increase, amounting to one-tenth of one per cent in October over September. The Bureau of Labor statistics said today, however there had been an average increase of about 15¼ per cent since October, 1931.

But G. O. P. is 'Liberal' Nick

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

Nick Murray Butler wants the Republican party to be more liberal.

Say, Nick, they conceded the Democrats 42 states.

If that ain't liberality then the prodigal son must have been a miser.

The Republicans gave Europe all the money we had, Nick, and that's generosity of the most elusive kind.

They steamed the budget up until the whistle blew and the safety valves got knock-kneed. They even spent their own money in the last campaign and that's certainly desperate hospitality.

We would be in much better shape, Nick, if the G. O. P. hadn't been so liberal. If you think they weren't generous with our national resources just try dipping a lamp wick in Teapot Dome. You certainly will stir up a lot of dust.

SHOWS WIDE GAP IN N.E. ELECTRIC VALUATIONS

$39,951,988 Difference in Balance Sheet and Company's Books Revealed by Examiner

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—Testimony that there was a difference of $39,951,988 between the fixed capital of subsidiary companies of the New England Gas & Electric Association as recorded on their books and as it appeared on the association's balance sheet at the end of 1929 was given the trade commission today by Ossian Cole Van Zandt, an examiner.

Appearing in the commission's investigation of public utilities, the examiner said the fixed capital appeared on the companies' books at $57,735,970 and on the balance sheet at $97,687,958.

"Of this difference," he continued, "$30,475,838 is equal to the excess of the cost to New England Gas & Electric Association of its investment in the stocks of the subsidiary companies over the book value (par, premium and surplus) of these stocks on the subsidiary companies' books at the time of purchase, which leaves a balance of $9,476,149."

This balance was described as the difference by which appraisals made of the subsidiaries "exceed the cost of the investment."

The examiner placed in the record statistics which he said showed the following "write-ups" in connection with the acquisition of the companies:

Worcester Gas Light Co., $3,121,752; Cambridge Gas Light Co., $7,527,686; Cape & Vineyard Electric Light Co., $237,450; New Hampshire Gas & Electric Co., $1,242,052; Derry, N. H., Electric Co., $205,9266; and New Bedford Gas & Edison Light Co., $705,310.

In addition he said there was a "write down" of $3,567,027 in connection with the acquisition of the Cambridge Electric Light Co.

"Approximately 83 per cent of the common stock of the New Bedford Gas and Edison Light Co. was acquired Dec. 29, 1929," Van Zandt said. "The fixed capital of the newly acquired company was immediately written up from a balance sheet valuation (less reserve for depreciation) of $14,308,495 to a valuation for consolidated balance sheet purposes of $30,080,968, creating a total 'write up' of $15,772,473."

The New England Gas and Electric Association, Van Zandt said, was organized by the Associated Gas and Electric system in 1926 as a holding corporation for a number of subsidiary companies.

HULTMAN WON'T PICK CAPTAINS

Capt. John J. Rooney, Capt. Herbert Goodwin, Capt. John E. Driscoll, Lieut.-Inspt. James A. Dennessey and Lieut.-Inspt. Edward T. Conway took the police commissioner by surprise.

At police headquarters the generally accepted view was that the mayor signed the papers in a huff over some grievance the nature of which remains unrevealed.

CURLEY EXPLAINS ACT

Mayor Curley, however, explained his action in this way this afternoon:

"There's no reason why we should make fish of one department and flesh of another. We should treat all with equal justice. In other departments, employes leave the service when the time for their retirement arrives.

"Some of these police officials were due for retirement two years ago. I agreed with Commissioner Hultman to retire any officers whose names he sent me, except Supt. Crowley."

The mayor sent a request to the police commissioner for the retirement paper of Patrolman John Downey of Station 4, Lagrange st., whose papers could not be found at the mayoral office yesterday. Downey and Supt. Crowley are the only policemen over the age limit who have not been retired.

Mystery Poster in Tech "36 Election

It may or may not be a subtle move against the candidacy of Miss Alice T. Hunter, first co-ed ever to run for a class presidency at Tech, but the fact remains that Tech freshmen gazed today on posters:

"Freshmen, are we men or are we sissies?"

Students in charge of the bulletin boards disclaimed any knowledge of the posters and Miss Hunter had "nothing to say."

Duncan Renaldo

Los Angeles, Nov. 17 (AP)—Duncan Renaldo, film actor, who portrayed one of the leading roles in the picture "Trader Horn," today appealed to the United States Attorney's office for an immediate trial on perjury charges in connection with his citizenship fight claiming he had lost $200,000 in motion picture contracts and faced the loss of $75,000 because of federal court delays.

Renaldo claimed he was born in Camden, N. J. The government contends he is a Rumanian subject.

"My citizenship was not questioned when I served three years in the army nor when I paid my income tax," said Renaldo.

New First Lady Borrows $10; Dashes to Meet Stork

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—On half an hour's notice and with $10 borrowed from a secret service man assigned to guard her husband, the President elect of the United States, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt left Albany for New York early today to greet her fourth grandchild on his arrival in the world.

The baby, son of Elliott Roosevelt, second son of Governor and Mrs. Roosevelt, was born shortly before his grandmother arrived. He is an eight-pound boy, and he and his mother are doing nicely, Mrs. Roosevelt said.

For some weeks there has been a standing order at the executive mansion that any long distance call for Mrs. Roosevelt, day or night, was to be put through immediately.

HAS TO BORROW $10

"The State trooper, on guard downstairs with the secret service man, called me at 2:45 this morning," she said today. "There was a train leaving at 3:18. I told him to get a car to take me to the station. Told Franklin I was leaving, dressed and caught the train.

"I was downstairs, ready to leave, when I discovered I had no money. I was afraid Franklin had gone back to sleep and didn't want to bother him, so I said to the trooper and the secret service man:

"'Has either of you got $10?'

"They both went through their pockets, the secret service man gave me $10, and I caught the train.

"I got into New York at 6:30, and the doctor met me in the hall and said the baby was here. He's a beautiful little boy, and everything is all right."

BUTLER DIDN'T KNOW HER

Mrs. Roosevelt, who has had considerable experience at nursing, remained with her daughter-in-law, the former Betty Donner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Donner of Villonova, Pa., while the nurse went to breakfast. She will return to Albany tonight or tomorrow.

"A funny thing happened," she said. "At 8 o'clock I called the mansion, reversing the charges, to tell Franklin the baby was here. The butler, unaware of the fact that I had left, thought someone was trying to [illegible] thing over on him and refused to accept the call."

TORCH SINGER RESTING IN MARYLAND

Nervous After Reynolds' Murder Decision, She Is Finished With Carolina

What does Libby Holman think—how does she feel about the manner in which the murder charge against her was dropped? Joseph Cowan tells in the following interview, the first she has given since the indictment was dropped.

By JOSEPH COWAN

(Copyright 1932, by International News Service.)

Havre de Grace, Md., Nov. 17 (INS)—Up the stairs came the rattle-bang-bang of a tinpan piano, insisting that nothing could be finer than to be in Carolina. Libby began to cry.

Everything had been all right until then. All right except for Libby Holman's nervousness. Once in a while she'd even been smiling a little.

But now she was crying. Not out loud, of course. Libby isn't the kind that cries out loud. Well anyway, not since those days back yonder when she was packing them in on Broadway singing the blues with a sob in her throat.

Why don't those hotel people strangle that fellow at the piano. Nothing could be finer than to be in Carolina—Libby never wants to see Carolina again.

He quit at last, but it was hard to get Libby talking again. Her mother had her arm around her shoulders and her father, Alfred Holman, the Cincinnati lawyer, was urging her to forget all about her troubles in Carolina.

Libby wasn't looking well at all. She isn't very tall, you know, and she never was particularly slender. She weighs 30 pounds more than when you saw her last.

You never saw a person more nervous in your life. As she sat there talking she couldn't keep her hands still. When she wasn't twisting one of her black gloves her hands were shaking as if with the ague.

"What's the matter, Libby? I thought I'd find you happy today."

She did her best to smile, but her brown eyes told you she didn't mean it.

CALLS IT UNFAIR

"I don't know," she said. "I suppose I ought to feel happy now. But I don't. It's been such a terrible thing. I couldn't sleep at all last night.

"It was all so unfair. That indictment. Those headlines in the newspapers. If I could only pick up a paper some time without seeing my name and my picture staring at me."

She took a puff at a cigarette, then laid it down and forgot about it.

"Are you going back on the stage ever, Libby? Broadway would certainly like to see you."

Maybe she didn't hear the question. She was looking out the window on the green waters of Chesapeake bay, dancing below in the Indian summer sunlight.

Lots of wild ducks out there. The season has just opened. A hunter for every duck, too, judging by the shooting.

"I LOVE THE STAGE"

Yes, she had heard the question.

"I just don't know how to answer that," she began, "I love the stage. I guess I love it more than anything else I have now. More than anything else, except my baby."

Except her baby, of course. The baby that will arrive in February, eight months after its father's death.

It makes you think of the calendar. Why Libby hasn't been married a year yet. It won't be a year until Nov. 29.

Here she is a bride and a widow already. A honeymoon with a murder indictment for a wedding present. Well, at least, she's been exonerated before the year is up.

Is she going back to the stage?

"I'd give anything to be able to," she tells you. "That all depends on the baby. The baby comes first, you know. If I can't go on with my career and take care of the baby the way it should be taken care of, then I'm through with the stage."

What's she twisting so on her left hand? Oh, it's her rings. The platinum wedding ring band Smith Reynolds gave her and the diamond engagement ring.

PARTED ON WEDDING DAY

It makes you think of her marriage again. Tragedy. Nothing but. You recall that she and Smith parted on their wedding day. He had to go ahead with that trip to Europe and his airplane flight from London to Shanghai.

You think of those letters and the cable he sent her from England and France a month later. Threatening suicide because they were separated.

"There's always the Mauser with a few cartridges in it," he wrote. The gun that killed him.

"What are you going to do until the baby arrives, Libby?"

STAYS WITH FRIENDS

Her mother answers the question.

"She's going to stay down here with her friends, I guess," said Mrs. Holman. "I'm going to be with her all the time."

Libby's attorneys, Benet Polikoff and William Graves, came in. They shook hands with her and she thanked them for all they have done for her.

LINDY SUSPECT GETS JAIL TERM

John D. Granger, 25, of Laconia, N. H., who was arrested in Weston September 27 with narcotics, a revolver and a notebook, mentioning the Lindbergh baby kidnaping, on his person, was sentenced today to two and one-half years in jail.

Although police have long since satisfied themselves he knows nothing of the kidnaping, he has declined to discuss the notebook and remains considerable of a "mystery man." Judge Thomas J. Hammond was informed in Middlesex Superior Court, where Granger pleaded guilty to possession of the drug and weapon.

Judge Hammond asked him whether he had anything to say in explanation of the notebook and the defendant said he had not. He once said he knew who killed Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., and later said he had only dreamed about it.

CHARGES FLY IN VOTE PROBE

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (AP)—Charges of fraud, purchase of votes, illegal assistance of voters and clashes between lawyers and Congressmen characterized the opening today of the investigation of the House committee on campaign expenditures into the Pennsylvania election.

The verbal fireworks were mainly between Rep. John E. Nelson, (R., Me.) and S. Davis Wilson, manager of the Roosevelt independent state campaign committee, who questioned witnesses.

The highlight of the session was when Thomas Hilton, Negro, a voter in the 11th Division of the 20th Ward, charged that State Rep. Clinton O. Sowers, a candidate for re-election, "passed out money which bought 200 votes."

CONVICT SEIZED IN NEWTON

Mrs. Mary Zacharis, 29, Gardner, scalp injuries.

Frank I. Craig, Arlington, officer at Billerica House of Correction, skull fracture.

The only person who escaped injury was William A. Osthugen of West Englewood, N. J.

Johnson, who police believed was driving the Gardner group's car, was hurled through the windshield when his machine and another occupied by Craig and Manter collided on a curve. His unconscious body was then run over by a car driven by Osthugen, police said.

POVERTY DEATH BARES JEWELS IN PAWN

South End Descendant Wills All to Daughter, 15-Year-Old N. H. Schoolgirl

Virginia Miles, Epping, N. H., schoolgirl, who came to Boston yesterday to save her mother's body from a pauper's grave, was back at her classes today.

Back among her schoolmates, studying the same old books, but with thoughts roaming far afield into the past to which a will left by her mother carried her.

A past peopled with great soldiers, aristocrats of the Old Dominion and Virginia dames. A past in which there were family heirlooms and precious pieces of jewelry handed down from generation to generation and now belonging to Virginia at the age of 15.

CIVIL WAR GENERAL

For Mrs. Lillian Poole who died under tragic circumstances in a South End room, a victim of malnutrition and the economic conditions, told her daughter everything in her will.

The schoolgirl read in this will:

"My daughter, Virginia, inherits the best blue blood of the South and is entitled to belong to the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames and the Daughters of the Confederacy."

No other schoolgirl in all New England probably can boast of that.

And she read further:

"Her great-grandfather was a Southern gentleman and noted general."

Yes, Virginia had heard her mother speak of him, but from letters found with the will she learned all about him for the first time. All about the glorious career of Gen. Henry Heth in the armies of the United States and the Confederacy.

The will also read:

"My minor child, Virginia Heth Miles, whose custody the Massachusetts courts gave me when I divorced her father, I leave in absolute guardianship to Mrs. Gage of Epping, N. H., until she is of age.

RING TO BE KEPT

"To my daughton, Virginia, I leave all personal property, diamonds included, all the jewelry to be held for her until she is of age. To her I also leave land at Meadow View, Va., amounting to 60 acres.

"My diamond horseshoe ring is priceless. It is to go to my daughter, Virginia. It was once the property of Gen. Burnside, and a gift to me from my grandmother, the widow of Gen. Harry Heth of Richmond and Washington.

"I request extra care of this ring and the family coat-of-arms ring. They are never to leave my daughter's hands but to kept in her family sacredly, forever.

"I name as executor of my estate, Miss Mary S. Lawrence of Washington, D. C. I wish to be buried in the town of Epping, N. H., where the name of Miles rests, a decent, quiet funeral."

This will, signed Lily Heth Miles, was drawn up Nov. 2, 1925, in Boston and witnessed by John Baker and Beatrice M. Smith.

ROGELL, EX-SOX PLAYER, UP IN RUM TRIAL

Answers to Martin Connors When Arraigned With 24 Seized on Amacitia

"Bill" Rogell, former Red Sox infielder and now a member of the Detroit Tigers, was still "Martin Connors" in federal court today.

That was the name he gave when arrested by coast guards November 1 with the seizure of the $100,000 British motorship Amacitia and its $100,000 liquor cargo.

And that is the name the federal authorities read from the list of defendants today, and Rogell answered to it.

Although identified by numerous persons who had seen him play, Rogell refused to admit his identity and his lawyer shooed questioners away.

Rogell and 24 other defendants are charged with conspiracy to violate the customs laws. Manuel Lewis, one of the 26 arrested in the seizure off Buzzards Bay, did not appear and was defaulted.

TOLD OF CAPTURE

Lieut. Richard M. Ross of the Woods Hole Coast Guard station told of the events on the night of the capture of the Amacitia, the swiftest and best-equipped vessel ever taken by coast guards in the North Atlantic area.

"I had instructions to look for the Amacitia," said Ross. "We left Woods Hole about 7:30 and shortly afterwards received a radio message that the vesesl we wanted was at West Island.

"We proceeded in that direction. The lookout saw a small boat without a light and saw a red flash across the water. We signaled the boat to draw alongside and we arrested 11 men.

"At about that same time we saw another red flash and a fellow in a boat hailed us, with: 'Hello, Bill.' We arrested him and three other men.

"We remained in that vicinity and about 11:30 saw a bright searchlight from the Coast Guard boat 813. Together we proceeded toward Poppy Island, then the 813 left us.

WRITES TO NAVIN

"In a very short time we saw two flares. That meant the Amacitia had been seized, and after a bit, the 813 came up convoying the motorship."

Rogell, it was learned today, has written to President Frank Navin of the Detroit American League club asserting his innocence and declaring he was going to an island with some comrades on a ducking expedition when arrested.

This disclosure is the first intimation that Rogell admits being the man arrested as Martin Connors. It is also the first indication of his defense.

"I dislike having my name brought into a case of this kind," wrote Rogell to his boss. "The thing I cannot understand is how they can connect us with the British boat when it was three miles from us.

"I am making my winter quarters in Centerville, Mass., with my family as I find it less expensive and very good hunting conditions."

SALES TAX SURE OF ADOPTION, SAYS FESS

Washington, Nov. 17—The non-partisan drive for a general manufacturers' sales tax is gaining momentum.

Senator Fess (R), of Ohio, said Congress would have to turn to the sales tax to fill the gaping treasury coffers.

Word that the Hoover administration will recommend a general manufacturers' sales tax levy gave Congressional advocates encouragement. Vigorous support from the administration will swing many wavering votes in Congress, it was believed. A vote early in the forthcoming session is expected.

Senator Fess said:

"I believe the administration will do all in its power to see that a bill is passed balancing the budget. We don't want to hand the incoming Democratic administration a treasury deficit.

"I know of no place to go for the needed revenue, save a more general sales tax."

Rep. Henry T. Rainey (D), of Illinois, Democratic House leader, voiced the sentiment of numerous Congressmen when he said the increase in postage rates should be repealed along with the stamp tax on bank checks.

Returning Congressmen brought reports of widespread dissatisfaction with the excessive selected sales tax carried in the present revenue act. Through a general sales tax, with a low rate applying to all manufactures, excepting a few necessities, these excessive taxes can be repealed, it was pointed out.

GANGSTERS IN NEW MOVE AT VOIGHT HOME

Quincy police today laid a trap near the home of Fred Voight, former pool operator, in the hopes of capturing a gang of youthful bandits who have threatened the home twice in four days.

The latest visit of the youths occurred last night when Voight's wife was alone in the house. The attempts at raids, police said, are the result of Voight's activity in causing the arrest of two East Boston youths on charges of attempted extortion.

Mrs. Voight was busy about the house last night when she noticed a car with extinguished lights. A group got out of it and were about to surround the house when one of them noticed her at the telephone.

They guessed that police were being called and they guessed correctly. They made their escape, however, before a squad arrived at the Voight home.

Mrs. Voight said she fears the gangsters will either take the life of her husband or kidnap the six-year-old daughter of the couple in retaliation for the arrest of the two now held.

The latest scare followed identification of Salvador DePalma, of East Boston, and Guy Laurano, of Crest ave., Beachmont, by Mrs. Voight as two of a group who threatened to kidnap her child unless a ransom was paid.

American Barbers Slandered by A. Bennett

By GILBERT SELDES

"Thorough badness of barbers." These words, without any comment, occur in Arnold Bennett's jottings on his first American journey (perhaps his only one) and are reprinted in the second volume of his "Journal," just issued by the Viking Press. Specifically they refer to the barbers of New York, in the great hotels and clubs to which a man of Bennett's prominence would go for a haircut, shave and singe—or whatever it was he wanted. I consider them an insult to American manhood and hope they will be resented by a national outburst of fury against the English, which will not abate even when we learn that Bennett was critical of British barbers, too.

Gilbert Seldes

After he got home he went to get his hair cut at Frinton, a small seaside resort, and found: "No antiseptic arrangements . . . dirty apron and coat hanging up on wall . . . array of mugs with sponges . . . thick dust . . . many cobwebs . . . chair too high." He could observe all this, yet when he came to God's country he had the nerve and the taste to talk about the badness of barbers. What on earth did he mean? Perhaps they were moral lepers or talked too little to suit him. Bennett liked people to be interesting to him.

I think nothing equals the dismay of an American when he has been shaved for the first time by an English barber, and, just as he sits back waiting for the hot towel, the barber hands him an old blackish sponge which has been held under a luke-warm watersprout—and is through. (Humanized barber shops exist in London, but the great tradition of unsanitary and careless barbering goes on.) I had barely begun to know the delights of being shaved in America when this happened to me. (My first day in England, too, and my luggage lost.) What astonished me most was that apparently prosperous and fastidious Englishmen assured me I had been to one of the best barbers in London—and thought that my horror at the common sponge was just another example of America's morbid desire for cleanliness.

They had another trick in these shops: When the barber wanted to brush your hair he picked up a brush, inserted it in the end of a long belt looped from a shaft near the ceiling and sent the brush skimming over your scalp by electric power; the shaft ran all around the room and dozens of belts hung down. I thought I was in a sweatshop and would go to work on the vests at any minute.

No Hatcheck Tip

It was a pleasure to come home. "Thorough badness of barbers" my eye! Even in Paris they haven't the first idea yet of how to make a man both comfortable and clean while he is being shaved. It's our own little invention and we ought to be proud of it. If they would only get rid of the hatcheck boy, who gets, for ten seconds' work, half as much as the barber gets in tips for half an hour's work, all would be well.

Fatal Great Men

The excellent H. M. Tomlinson has a piece in the forthcoming issue of the "American Spectator" in which he refers to a list of the dozen greatest men and says: "All the names were of 'men of action' . . . Dear God, if only the attendant midwife in each case had but got a tip from futurity, and so a chance to save unlucky mankind from those subsequent infernal activities!" I suppose Caesar and Napoleon and half a dozen other generals and kings were on the lists; they usually are. It is rather sweet of dumb, old mankind always to rank among its great men those who have done it most harm. In fact, I would like to make a list of the greatest blights on humanity—those who would have done us the greatest service if they had never been born—to see whether it wouldn't be composed almost entirely of "great men."

Lenin or Rasputin?

Not to mention those who still can favor us by removing themselves, let us imagine a Russian Prince of the old regime, the solitary Russian Prince who is NOT driving a taxi in Paris; he is a taxi-caller in New York. Ask him to make a list of fatal men and he probably will put Lenin at the top; history may call Lenin the savior of Russia and give him the post of assassin to Rasputin, shared with the Czarina. For Germany, Bismarck, because he first set Germany on the way to becoming a world power; if he hadn't, if Germany had remained a loose group of disunited states the war could not have occurred. For the modern world, all inventors, rather than statesmen and generals, since the inventors made it possible for us to open up back country, to spread civilization, to sell lots and lots and too many lots of goods, and so led us bang into a depression. The American man of action most of us would name is Theodore Roosevelt; he was responsible for far less bloodshed than most great rulers, and Wilson, definitely not a man of action, led us into a great war.

HERO'S REWARD PLOT BARED

Jamesville, Wis., Nov. 17 (AP)—A plot to claim a hero's reward after endangering President Hoover's special train when it passed through Beloit, Nov. 5, en route to St. Paul, was charged by authorities today against Henry Vance, 37, Beloit Negro held on a larceny charge.

Sheriff J. S. Fessenden said Vance admitted he and others had planned to remove spikes from the rails and then, in hope of a reward, notify Beloit police that an attempt had been made to wreck the presidential train.

Two Killed as Mob Protests Arrests

3 Lessons in Sacrifice, for Wife, for Husband, for Self

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—"Some men," wrote Samuel Galitska, "die for their countries, like heroes."

They found it written on a bit of paper beside his body yesterday in a gas-filled room.

"Some men die . . . like heroes. I am dying because what little I have left in insurance and cash is just about sufficient to keep my wife for the rest of her life."

He wrote it down, and he added:

"I leave behind me the most wonderful woman in the world." In war, in the hysteria of flapping flags and marching men, they called it the 'supreme sacrifice.' But there is no war now, and, as Galitska pointed out, he could hardly expect to die 'like heroes.'"

Sacrifice?

Mrs. Daniel O'Connell, middle-aged, gray-haired mother of four children, stood in the Tombs talking through the bars to her husband. His investment company, a $2,000,000 firm, had failed. He had pleaded guilty to grand larceny.

There remained from the wealth that had once been theirs an $85,000 home and a $200,000 art collection. No law could take them from her to help pay for the larceny her husband had admitted.

No law; but Mrs. O'Connell, tearful to the point of collapse, made her decision. She announced she would sign away all her rights in these properties, giving up the comfort and the security they assured.

Her husband will suffer prison, but his problem of food and shelter is met. She by her own choice will have that problem to solve.

In the courtroom to which O'Connell was called were other women, gray like Mrs. O'Connell. They saw O'Connell face prison with different emotions than she. They were women whose savings of years were lost in the O'Connell collapse.

Sacrifice?

Joseph Baumann, five times reprieved from the electric chair for murder committed during a holdup, testified that his friend and pal, Francis Reddy, was the instigator of the crime.

It was Baumann, and he admits it, who fired the murder bullet. But he does not want to sit in that chair at Sing Sing. Better, in the Baumann philosophy, that his pal, Reddy, sit there—and burn.

"Baumann," said Reddy's attorney, as the case neared the jury today, "is a criminal who didn't bat an eyelash while he sat here trying to send a pal to the chair."

The life of his friend to save his own. That is Baumann's sacrifice.

SUN SETTING ON BUSINESS GIRL?

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—Probability that the saturation point in the absorption of women into employment is approaching, or at least that their entrance into occupations is slowing up, was voiced today by Mary Elizabeth Pidgeon, research director of the women's bureau of the United States Department of Labor.

"The 1930 figures," she said, "added more than 2,200,000 women to those employed in 1920, an increase of 25.8 per cent, while at the same time the woman population 10 years of age and over increased only 20.6 per cent. The proportion women form of all employed persons now represents 22 per cent, and this also has shown a decided increase from 1920 to 1930—about 7 per cent.

"Coupled with the fact the population increase over 50 years has shown a fair degree of regularity, this would seem to point either to a slowing up of the entrance of women into occupations, or to the approach of a saturation point in the absorption of women into employment."

GERMAN ARMS PARITY URGED

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT

Geneva, Nov. 17 (INS)—Complete armament equality for Germany was urged by Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, who voiced the arms proposals of Great Britain before the steering committee of the disarmament conference here today.

"Limitations of Germany's armaments should be contained in the same disarmament convention as defines the limitations of other nations," Sir John said.

His speech was considered a move toward making it possible for Germany to participate again in the disarmament conference, thus ending the arms impasse.

He asked for a general convention to supercede the armament restriction of the treaty of Versailles, and demanded that Germany be present at Geneva when the terms were considered.

"Unless the armament burden is lifted from the world, it will have consequences more serious than any aggression," Norman H. Davis, American arms expert, told the steering committee.

Davis offered "America's whole hearted association to the desire of Arthur Henderson to bring Germany back into the conference," adding:

"The United States will co-operate with efforts for disarmament as long as hope remains."

El Blocked as Boy Plays on Track

Elevated train service between Thompson and City sq. stations was tied up for more than 10 minutes today when a 10-year-old Charlestown boy led elevated employes a chase along the "cat walk" between the two stops.

The boy, Stanley Freistone, of Seminary st., jumped into the station pit at Thompson sq. and then walked the tracks toward City sq.

Shortly afterward a train pulled into Thompson sq. The motorman caught sight of the youngster walking ahead. He notified the station master. The youngster ignored cries and started to run along the "cat walk," the employes after him. Half way between the two stations he was caught and brought back and turned over to policemen who took him home.

School Girls' Alibi Signed by Sir Harry

Cheney, Wash., Nov. 17 (AP)—Sir Harry Lauder delayed a train and normal school girls arrived here from Spokane late for classes. They appealed to the conductor who took the problem to Sir Harry, handing him a paper on which he had scribbled:

"Dear teacher, please excuse Myrle Baker and her friends for being late to school. Train late on account of being held for me."

Sir Harry signed it.

GRAPE GROWERS THANK HEARST

San Francisco, Nov. 17—Resolutions thanking William Randolph Hearst and his newspapers for the stand taken against prohibition were unanimously adopted yesterday by directors of the Grape Growers League of California.

The resolutions set forth that public sentiment throughout the United States as reflected in the presidential election gives positive evidence that prohibition is about to be done away with. It then adds:

"Whereas the campaign for true temperance as opposed to the evils created by prohibition has had among its outstanding leaders the Hearst newspapers, and Mr. William Randolph Hearst.

"And whereas this campaign is now on the threshold of success, due in a large part to the intelligent and aggressive action of the Hearst newspapers:

"Now therefore be it resolved that the Grape Growers' League of California, on behalf of 28,000 growers and of the United Grape Products Manufacturers of California, hereby extend its appreciation to Mr. William Randolph Hearst for his vision and leadership in the nation-wide fight."

To which Mr. Hearst replied with the following telegram:

"Many thanks for your kind telegram. It will certainly give me pleasure to continue the fight until we finally achieve success."

Boys Tardy, But Blame Police

A group of about 20 East Boston grammar school boys will have to write across their excuses for tardiness at today's classes in the Lyman school, "See Capt. Archibald F. Campbell of the police station.

The captain, in charge of the East Boston station, was gazing out of the window this morning, before school hours, when he caught sight of the boys in the rear of the Columbia Trust and East Boston Savings Bank buildings, knocking over ash barrels, strewing the debris into Paris st.

The youngsters poked through the waste material with little care about the dumping of the 25 barrels. Patrolman Lawrence McCarthy was dispatched to the scene to order the youngsters clean up the mess they had made.

The officer corraled the youngsters and with shovels and brooms, collected from a nearby fire station, the boys refilled the barrels. The police officer then hurried them off to school.

The youngsters were looking for money that might have been left among the papers, they told the police.

Trustee Hangs Self

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—The body of Solomon Richman, a member of the board of trustees of Harbor San'tarium, was found hanging from a door in his hotel.

DOCTOR'S DECOY FAILED TO WIN WIFE BACK

Salem, Nov. 17—Husbands, many of whom have little ingenuity themselves, heard with growing excitement today the decoy plan of Dr. Michael C. McGinley to lure his wife back home.

It was all very simple, the Lynn society doctor merely dropping a lacy, perfumed, feminine handkerchief in the bedroom where his wife absent for five days except when she occasionally dropped in could not fail to see it.

The only trouble with the plan, Dr. McGinley testified today in probate court, where he is combatting the divorce action of his wife, Mabel, was that it didn't work. Mrs. McGinley's absence continued, except for the brief visits.

Today the Lynn doctor had more success for his side, because when the case was ended, Judge Alden P. White dismissed Mrs. McGinley's divorce petition for lack of evidence.

"I think not," he said.

"FRAMEUP" EASY, SHE SAID.

Dr. McGinley said his wife on one occasion called him "dumb" and taunted him with stories of how much better she might have done in marrying someone else. Anyway, she said, it didn't take much to "get something on a man," according to the doctor.

The wife named Percival Wyman of Waterville, Me., as a desirable man she could have married if she were free, the doctor asserted.

Regarding his secretary, Mrs. Moore, the doctor denied in cross-examination that he had ever introduced her as "Miss Dorothy Newcomb" and he said, thoughtfully, that he could not say she was pretty or attractive.

SAT ON PORCH

Mrs. Moore was hired, he said, because his wife refused to answer the telephone for him and he had to have somebody. He paid the secretary $10 a week at first, and raised her $2 when her hours were lengthened to 8:45 p. m.

The witness admitted having sat on the veranda with his secretary on occasions, but said it was "right on the main street in daylight," and they sat there because it was too hot in the office.

He admitted also instructing Mrs. Moore not to allow his wife to use the telephone and to cut the cord if she attempted to use it. His wife made too many toll calls, the doctor said.

Abbe, a native of Maine, lived for many years in Virginia.

POMERENE AND CURLEY TALK MODEL HOMES

Plans for destruction of old and unwholesome tenement properties in North and South Ends and erection in their place of municipal apartment houses were discussed today by Mayor Curley and former Senator Atlee Pomerene, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. during a conference in the Copley Plaza Hotel.

If Mayor Curley is able to carry out his plans, money for the projects will be furnished by the organization headed by ex-Senator Pomerene and hundreds of jobless men will be given the task of demolishing the condemned structures.

There is also a possibility that houses of a similar nature will be erected along the South Boston Strandway and in East Boston.

The mayor revealed that officials of the City Planning Board had been working on plans for such work for the past eight months and that the idea first came to him during his visit to England 18 months ago when he visited buildings in various communities there which had been erected by municipal authorities for the purpose of giving citizens proper and modern housing facilities.

While ex-Senator Pomerene did not indicate that he would take any action on the matter at this time he appeared greatly interested in the plans, Mayor Curley said. Others in attendance at the conference were William J. McDonald, local realtor, and Carl Dennett of the First National Bank.

MAINE BANKER IN LOVE SUIT

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 17 (INS)—An alleged romance between a wealthy banker and a fisherman's wife was the basis of a $50,000 alienation of affections suit set for trial in federal court here today.

William F. Feger, of Daytona Beach, a fisherman, accuses his wife, whom he has since divorced, and the defendant, Philip F. Chapman, prominent banker of Portland, Me.

Feger charges the couple met April 5, 1931, when the woman was operating a restaurant across the street from the hotel where the banker was staying.

When Feger divorced her he was given custody of their two small children. Chapman has a wife and three grown children.

Both Mrs. Feger and Chapman are here for the trial.

Band Leader Kidnaped and Robbed of $950, He Says

Somebody put the snatch on Mr. Lew Conrad on Tuesday, Mr. Conrad said today, took him for a long motor ride and $950 and then gave him an osteopathic massage on the back of the neck until he fell asleep.

The snatch occurred in Boston, said Mr. Conrad, and the massage in New Haven, and when he came to himself there he was walking in a fog outside the Grand Central station in New York, all by himself and due to be in a Boston hotel leading his orchestra and saying howdy to the folks over the radio. This put him in a very embarrassing situation.

"Kidnaped!" said Mr. Conrad. "I went through a harrowing experience."

MEETS THE STRANGER.

"Kidnaping," said Capt. John M. Anderson of the detective bureau, "is a very serious offense indeed and if Mr. Conrad was snatched and robbed of his 950 potatoes, why does he not say something about it to the powers of authority?"

It seems that on Tuesday, according to Mr. Conrad, Mr. Conrad had cashed a check for $950 and was standing looking into a furniture store window very near police headquarters, thinking what nice furniture it was, when along came a man.

This man, said Lew, said, "Hullo Lew" but Mr. Conrad, said Mr. Conrad, was not acquainted with this man, thinking him just such another admirer as dances to his band and likes to seem on terms of intimacy with band leaders.

"You do not know me," this man said, said Mr. Conrad, "but there is a friend of yours over in the car there wants to see you. Come over." So Mr. Conrad went over, and the man in the car pulls a very large gun and says, "Get in."

ALL VERY STRANGE

So Mr. Conrad got in, he said, thinking it very strange, and the car rolled away and the man with the cannon kept shoving in into his ribs until they got past Norumbega Park.

After they passed the park the gun was put away and everything went along nicely, although Conrad knew he was being kidnaped, he said. They headed in such a direction he thought they might be getting an early start for the Harvard-Yale game, but when they got to New Haven a very strange thing occurred.

There, said Mr. Conrad, one of the men started fiddling with the back of Mr. Conrad's neck and kind of massaging it, like, and fiddling away until all of a sudden Mr. Conrad fell asleep.

Well, the next thing he knew, he said, there he was walking in the fog outside the Grand Central in New York and it was too late to be back for his nightly stint and broadcast as per contract in Boston.

He felt in his pocket and found 20 smackers and he thought they were very kind to leave him car fare home, he said, so he telephoned his wife and mother, went to see a friend and fainted dead away.

And after that he came to again and waited around and when it was next morning, which was yesterday morning, he went back to the Grand Central, where he had awakened in the fog after the fiddling at his neck, and bought himself a ticket home on the 8:30 train.

COLD WAVE IS DUE TOMORROW

The cold wave which has swept down through the South to chill Dixie in the last two days, is due to hit Boston tomorrow, according to the weatherman.

Fair weather will prevail today and tomorrow, but the temperature will fall between 15 and 20 degrees. The weather throughout the country has been the freakiest in many years.

A cold wave which sent temperatures down below freezing swept over Northern Texas and Louisiana, and started up along the coast toward Boston. Snow fell in many of the mid-western states, with Indianapolis suffering the heaviest toll in 30 years.

Philadelphia enjoyed springlike weather, while New York was covered with a chill fog with colder weather promised.

MAN SLAIN AND GIRL KIDNAPED

Chicago, Nov. 17 (INS)—A young desperado who kidnapped a 19-year-old girl a few minutes after he had murdered a man in a hold-up was hunted by police throughout the city today.

He attacked the girl, forced her to drive within a block of her home, and with police hot up his trail, leaped from the car and escaped.

Authorities said the hunted kidnapper shot and killed Frank Jordan, 38-year-old salesman, as the latter sat beside a young woman friend, Miss Emma Danke, 25, in a parked automobile.

A few minutes later the man held up Miss Henry, a niece of former Police Commissioner Alcock, and James Guisinger, 23. He trussed Guisinger, hurled him from the car and forced the girl at gunpoint to drive him away. Often, during the made ride, she said, they heard the sirens of police cars.

Saturday November 19

The buyers have been hankerin ter have a day—Dollar Day 'sbeen overworked so Eph sez:—

"SIMOLEON DAY"

Used ter hear bout em down to Toddy Pond but couldn't control anything so large. Looked it up in the Century Dickshunary and here's what we found:—

"SIMOLEON (Origin Obscure) A Dollar"
(Guess they're obscure all rite!)

And this verse:
(Kansas City Daily Times, Dec. 23, 1903)
"She wears a dress, it cost no less
Than ninety-five simoleons;
It's faded tan, and looser than
That great coat of Napoleon's."

So we added this:
(Now at Raymond's in 1932)
"She can buy a dress, that costs much less,
Only ONE great big SIMOLEON;
'Tis brilliant hue, fits closer, too,
Than that great coat of Napoleon's."

SATURDAY NOVEMBER 19 we're gointer let you have the gushdarndest stuff you ever saw—fer a SIMOLEON.

Loew, who is the son of Marcus Loew, film magnate, was not injured. Joe Rosthal, New York attorney, also escaped unhurt.

Dickson is survived by the widow, who is an expectant mother, and a small son, Tommy.

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—J. H. Thomas, secretary for Dominions, said that reports from Dublin showed a total of 88,376 unemployed in the Irish Free State on October 12, compared with 30,398 on March 14.

Wales Mingles in Crowd; Beats Drum

Slips Away From the Elaborate Guard and Rubs Elbows With Belfast Celebrators

Recognized at Once and Is Loudly Cheereed as He Disregards Danger

Belfast, Nov. 17 (AP)—For half an hour or more last night the Prince of Wales, indulging a truly princely impulse, slipped through the elaborate guard provided for his protection and mingled with a cheering, celebrating crowd in the streets of Hillsborough Village.

The excursion became generally known only this morning after he had packed his golf clubs and set out, under heavy guard once more, for a game on the Newcastle course several miles from the city.

With that disregard for his personal safety which characterized his service in the fighting areas during the World War, he went A. W. O. L. last night with his equerry and one detective.

They slipped away from Hillsborough Castle and went down to the village where a huge crowd was celebrating the dedication of the new parliament building.

Their white shirt fronts made them conspicuous and the prince was immediately recognized. Dozens of torchbearers pressed about him and there was a cannonade from the barbaric drums of goatskin which boom through such celebrations in Ireland.

There was a tremendous cheer when the laughing prince seized a pair of drumsticks and, banging them against a nearby drum, contributed his bit to the terrific din.

He had exposed himself to the very dangers from which the police had gone to great lengths to protect him. The authorities had provided an unusually strong guard against the possibility of attack by radicals responsible for yesterday's demonstrations against his presence in Ireland.

After half an hour or so the Prince started back to the castle, the crowd cheering after him.

The house party which he had deserted was waiting at the gates, but before he went inside the Prince was boosted to the top of the wall. The crowd was still.

"My sister told me about these drummers over here," he said, "and warned me not to miss them."

"Come back again!" the crowd shouted.

"Oh, I'm coming back," the Prince replied.

Then he went inside and the castle gates were closed.

Mrs. Freiman Again Heads Jewish Women

VON PAPEN AND CABINET QUIT

Berlin, Nov. 17 (AP)—The entire German cabinet, headed by Franz von Papen, resigned today and its resignation was accepted by President Von Hindenburg.

Opposition by all but two small parties in the Reichstag dictated the retirement.

Adolf Hitler's National Socialists, strongest in the opposition, never have supported Von Papen.

Centrists, Bavarians and all others except Nationalists and Populists have announced opposition since the last Reichstag election. That left the chancellor with only 10 per cent of the new Reichstag.

Immediately speculation began as to a successor. One name most frequently mentioned is that of Dr. Heinrich Schnee, who recently returned from the Far East where he served the Lytton Commission investigating for the League of Nations.

Recently he resigned from the People's party.

RUTH ELDER TO DODGE COURT

Reno, Nevada, Nov. 17—Ruth Elder, aviatrix, divorced this week from Walter Camp, Jr., will not have to appear in police court today and perhaps not at all.

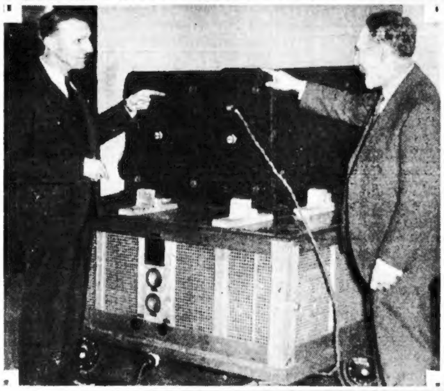
Police said she looked on while Kendrick Johnson and M. J. Holland fought after a Monday night party in an apartment house. Each received a black eye and Holland filed assault and battery charges against Johnson, a Reno attorney.

Dist. Atty. A. P. Johnson said today the hearing had been "indefinitely postponed" to give the defendant more time to recover.

Johnson was arrested after Holland complained the attorney struck him when he tried to stop Johnson from beating Miss Elder. Miss Elder denied she had been beaten. She said she "ducked" when hostilities began.

The prosecutor said he doubted if Holland would press charges against Johnson, particularly because two policemen who attended the party have announced they will testify that Holland deliberately picked a fight and "got what he asked for."

CHEST TURNS FEVER INTO A LIFE-SAVER



Here's the chest that fills the human body with fever so that life may not become extinct. It is the invention of Dr. Willis R. WET BLOC HEAD FOR BEER BILL

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—A proposal to have the House Ways and Means Committee draft a beer bill for presentation upon the convening of Congress in December was made today to House leaders by Representative O'Connor, Democrat, of New York.

A leader in the House wet bloc, he conferred with Representative Rainey, Democratic floor leader, and Chairman Collier of the ways and means committee.

"The public will protest any delay in beer legislation and if a bill is prepared I am sure the House will pass it before Christmas," O'Connor said.

Bride of 7 Months Admits Killing Mate

Shamokin, Pa., Nov. 17 (INS)—Mrs. Mary Stank, 50, confessed today to the murder of her husband, Jacob Stank, 70, to whom she had been married seven months, and implicated her crippled son, Clement Kiesel, 27, in the hammer slaying, State police announced.

Kiesel denied his mother's accusations. No motive for the killing was established.

PHILADELPHIA IN WATERWAY ROW

Washington, Nov. 17 (AP)—Objection to the proposed St. Lawrence waterway was expressed today at a Senate sub-committee hearing from a new quarter—Philadelphia—after Great Lakes shipping interests ended their testimony against the project.

Spokesman for the Lakes Carriers Association, Joseph Wood, president, and George A. Marr, vice-president and secretary, said the proposed waterway would prove of more benefit to Canadian grain shippers than American.

They argued also that the insurance for freight cargoes over the St. Lawrence route would be prohibitive.

Ratification of the treaty with Canada for construction of the waterway also opposed by Philip H. Gadsden, president of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the joint executive transportation committee of Philadelphia commercial organizations.

He testified the project would "represent an exorbitant charge upon the United States Treasury and such benefits as may accrue will be enjoyed in far greater measure by Canada" than by the United

New 'Radiotherm' Makes Disease Fight Itself

Fever made to order while you wait.

If your temperature is low and you'd like a nice, sizzling one, the General Electric Co. can accommodate you.

Dr. Willis R. Whitney, vice-president attached to the Schenectady plant, has invented a fever-producing device.

The device, with radio as its basis, will be given its first demonstration tonight at a meeting of the Lynn branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the General Electric River works plant, West Lynn.

FEVER SAVES LIVES

The demonstration will be in charge of Dr. C. F. Tenney and A. B. Page of the company's Schenectady laboratories.

Medical science now uses fever to combat certain diseases, a development which is in the same category as the injection of maleria germs for treatment of certain forms of insanity. Experts say fever cures by burning up the germs in certain types of pulmonary illnesses, pneumonia and others.

Dr. Whitney's "radiotherm" is a chest-like contrivance on wheels, with straw covering to furnish ventilation for the radio equipment it conceals. On top are two condensing plates 22x32 inches between which the fever-seeking patient is placed on a stretcher.

RADIOS INTO BODY

The attending physician can by radio waves produce the temperature desired. In severe pneumonia cases when patients lack fever there is always danger of sub-normality and death. The skill with which the "radiotherm" is used depends on the attending physician's treatment.

The device develops 10,000,000 cycles below the short wave, an energy sufficient to broadcast around the world, but instead of being shot into space this energy passes through the patient's body by interchange of the condenser-plates.

Dr. Whitney conceived the invention by noting that young men at work on short wave tubes in the company's radio laboratory showed symptoms of fever. He perfected the "radiotherm" a year ago and it is already installed in many leading hospitals.

Letters Reflect Early Troubles of Navy

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (AP)—Some of the fire and spirit that makes the name of John Paul Jones famous, and a bit of the difficulty he and his fellow sea heroes encountered in establishing the American Navy during the Revolution are reflected in a packet of autograph letters just inventoried in the estate of Mrs. Sarah Parker Staley. Six of the letters bear the signatures of "J. Paul Jones," first of the great American sea fighters. John Hancock's letters also are included.

Beatrice Lillie Tells How to Be Funny—and She Knows!

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

"Miss Lillie, take the dialogue opening of 'Mister, that's the attraction!'"

From the front of the rehearsal theater sounded the stage director's command. And on to the otherwise bare stage stepped the vibrant Beatrice Lillie, in private life Lady Peel of England, smiling her famed coinage:

"Pul-leeze!"

Miss Lillie was taking time out to express her philosophy that what the country needed was not so much the return of the five-cent mug of foamy, frothy beer but a good sense of humor.

Save for a dozen or so principals of "Walk a Little Faster," which tomorrow night will have its premiere at the Majestic Theater, the stage was bare. No props, no furniture, no stooges and no foils—just a place to stand and self-express in the interests of the revue and its dramatic moments, in preparation for the entertainment and amusement of the paying customers.

HOME BOY MAKES GOOD

In the front row sat Monte Woolley, stage director, and Murray Queen, general manager, in whispered comment. In secluded corners, girl and boy dancing teams tapped away without music their routine, which tomorrow night will win appreciative favor from an interested audience.

Before the unlighted footlights pranced Beatrice Lillie, her shiny dark eyes flashing the characteristic Lillie glance. On either side of her "funned" Bobby Clark and his partner of some 30 years, Paul McCullough, the latter a Brookline resident of many years.

In a far-off corner seat in the darkened theater foyer sat an unobtrusive, quiet-miened young man. There was nothing of the theatrical about him. He was the be-spectacled youth of study and class room. He laughed out loud. His demonstration was sufficient proof that the scene was good.

And the youth, after laughing aloud, slumped into greater inconspicuousness. John J. Shubert, son of J. J. Shubert of famous theatrical producers, had put aside his law books to watch a play in rehearsal. The lad, a sophomore at the Harvard Law School, played hookey, I guess, to watch "Walk a Little Faster" whipped into fast-moving revue material preparatory to the opening.

FOOTLIGHTS VS. BLACKSTONE

Maybe it is law that John J. Shubert is giving his mind to, but for the few hours he watched Monte Woolley's influence and suggestions change the tenor of the scenes, his heart was lost to the lure of the footlights.

The great Lillie was being herself as she tripped here and there throughout the phantom movements of the scene in a make-believe manner of lifting and replacing objects. And when her antics were over for the moment, she turned back to me and continued:

"Be yourself! It is the only way! When you are not yourself, you are self-conscious, and when you are self-conscious, you're terrible. I ad lib a great deal—sh, sh, don't tell the boss."

And as she spoke the dynamic force of facial expression changed an otherwise placid face into an infectious expression of humorous wit. Lady Peel is not good-looking. She could never be termed a real beauty. But when she speaks and her eyes sparkle with a deliciously malicious twinkle, it is then you feel like bursting forth into song:

"There's danger in your eyes, Beatrice!"

It wasn't so long ago that Beatrice Lillie was a member of the Theater Guild production of George Bernard Shaws "Too Good to Be True." It wasn't a fitting role for the English comedienne, but it satisfied a cherished ambition to do a play. And now it is over with, and now that she has gone, shall we say, from the sublime to the ridiculous, Beatrice Lillie is once again herself, happy in her return to her first love, revue and comedy.

CAN YOU SEE THE JOKE?

The great business of an individual, says the distinguished comedienne, is to educate his funny bone so that he can see the humor of the thing, even if the joke is on himself. And, if he does this, he'll get a great kick out of life.

Ever since Beatrice Lillie made her debut in London 17 years ago at the Alhambra Theater, after being graduated from St. Agnes College, she has made audiences happy with her funny gestures, her humorous antics and her rip-roarir fun-making on the stage.

She has been true to her philosophy, platitudinous though it be, that "I want to be happy, but I can't be happy, till I make you happy, too.

"My 11-year-old son, back home in a preparatory school in England, says to me, 'Mother, don't you think the audience laughs too hard at you?'" Miss Lillie told us, jokingly. "He seems to be afraid the people are laughing at me, instead of with me."

McCULLOUGH ON CANE

McCullough did his workout with the aid of a cane, the result of an automobile accident in New York last week, in which the funster figured. He wasn't exactly hobbling on his cane, though he came pretty close to it.

WALTER HAMPDEN TO RETURN

Star's Revival of "Cyrano de Bergerac" Comes to Colonial for Week in December

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

While he does not put it into words from which there could be no retreat, Walter Hampden's forthcoming visitation to the Colonial in "Cyrano de Bergerac" is announced sparingly as a farewell tour. Mr. Hampden will take over the Colonial for a single week, starting Dec. 5. Following Boston, Mr. Hampden will take his wares to New York for a month's engagement and, as he puts it himself, "then sheathing the great-nosed Gascon's rapier, perhaps forever."

* * *

Walter Hampden

Though one may not question Mr. Hampden's intentions, yet he may not find it so easy to tuck "Cyrano" away on some hidden shelf. For a good many seasons this Rostand drama has been the pivot around which Mr. Hampden rolled up fame and fortune. And farewell tours, also, are strictly relative. Even so great an artist as Sarah Bernhardt made her farewell tours international events. Upon at least six, perhaps more occasions, Boston playgoers bade a fond goodbye to the divine Bernhardt only to crash the box office the following year for another opportunity to worship at her feet. Farewells were a big item in her business. Mr. Hampden believes that he will never find another "Cyrano," but this does not take away from him the temptation to do other things. It is his plan now to enter upon new fields. But if careful observations over 30 years of so-called farewell appearances mean anything, Mr. Hampden will someday re-appear in the play that more than anything else endowed him with distinction as an actor.

RATTLING THE SKELETON Vernon Duke, composer of the score for "Walk a Little Faster," which opens tomorrow night at the Majestic, is a musician with an alias. He is plain Mr. Duke when composing for such frivolous things as revues, but upon his "Second Symphony," which is soon to be presented by the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, he inscribes his real name—Vladimir Dukelsky.

Stone Returns

Fred Stone, hero of many a big campaign in musical extravaganza, has gone back to his first love—vaudeville. In the more golden era of vaudeville 30 years ago, Mr. Stone and his partner, Dave Montgomery, toiled earnestly in blackface for B. F. Keith and were not expected to contribute more than two stage appearances daily. The changing times have brought about realignments of the actor, and Mr. Stone, who comes to the RKO Keith on Saturday will find himself a very busy entertainer. He will do four shows a day. Mr. Stone will have for assistants his talented daughter, Dorothy, and a likely dancer named Charles Collins, who may also be entered in the records as Dorothy's husband. Before he was taken in charge by Charles Dillingham and, with Dave Montgomery, exploited in musical comedy, Mr. Stone was one of vaudeville's old reliables. The Stone and Montgomery team was, possibly, the first of American variety entertainers to make the grade in London. They were followed by McIntyre and Heath, but Stone and Montgomery (with the names reversed) opened the way for an American invasion of the British capital.

* * *

JUST ANOTHER POOH BAH—Jack Goldstein, director of publicity for RKO in New England, has unquestionably had more employers in his term of service than any other press agent now pestering the editors. He has been profitably employed, in chronological order, by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, NETOCO, Publix, the Shuberts and finally and presently, by Radio-Keith-Orpheum.

Benefit Performance

In an effort to build up its own community chest, the Actors' Fund of America, with the assistance of Ernest Truex and the members of the "Whistling in the Dark" company, will sponsor a special matinee performance of that comedy next Tuesday. It is promised that every dollar taken in at the box office will be donated to the great stage charity, of which Daniel Frohman has been president for 30 years. The Actors' Fund of America expends more than $200,000 annually in providing relief for sick, disabled and unfortunate members of the theatrical profession. For this benefit performance the services of Mr. Truex and his company, and the use of the Plymouth theater, are generously contributed.

Globe Trotter

Pictures that graphically portray the hurricane that hit the Cuban coast with a loss of a thousand lives and that left the southern district of the island in desolation are contained in the issue of Hearst's Metrotone News, on screen at Loew's Orpheum tomorrow. The sea wall at Havana is shown holding off the gigantic waves as the seas hurl themselves against old Morro Castle and fort across the bay.

There are also pictures of the damage done in New York City and environs by the tail-end of the gale which caused unprecedented high tides to flood the streets, hampering traffic and causing many inhabitants to take to boats for transportation. The Globe Trotter vividly describes the disaster.

It certainly looks as if beer is going to come back soon! Since the election men have been put to work setting up and re-furnishing bars in leading hotels and restaurants in New York City with bar-tenders practicing on near-beer just to keep their hand in. In a statement to Hearst Metrotone News, Senator Bingham of Connecticut, declares we will surely have beer by Christmas if the Democratic members of the House and Senate follow up the campaign pledges.

Despite their almost superhuman effort, Columbia's hopes for the eastern gridiron championship go aglimmering when Brown's Warriors, so far undefeated, grab a 7-6 victory from the Lions.

Bowdoin Theater

FOUR WOMEN IN HERO'S LIFE

Do and Don't

Act naturally, but do not act, is the paradoxical advice offered by Josef von Sternberg, motion picture director.

Von Sternberg declares it is only when actors forget they are actors that they are valuable in front of a camera. He demands of every player in his pictures, whether they be stars or atmospheric "bits," that their reaction to any given situation be natural.

"Forget the camera's presence," he admonishes. "Realize that this little thing you are to do is not a great national event, act as you would in real life—but do not act."

Polly Moran and Marie Dressler, two cinema aces, are the stars of "Prosperity," on the Loew's State and Orpheum screens, tomorrow.

Dance Group Formed at Fine Arts Theater

The Fine Arts Theater is forming a dance group under the leadership of a young Boston dancer, Dorothy Thuringer, a protegee of Harald Kreutzberg. The aim of this group will be to give dance interpretations from time to time after the pattern of the Moscow Art Theater of the Dance.

Helen Vinson Featured Player in Cast of "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang"

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Four women step into the hero's life—and but one becomes a burning memory as he goes on his way, much like a modern Wandering Jew of the old tradition. Of the skirted quartette, one is just a sweet young thing, a second is a lady of much leisure in easy ways of living; the third is a gold-digger, and the fourth—well, she is a gem of womankind.

* * *

Helen Vinson

There we have four types. All four are expertly portrayed in "I am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang," that graphic and compelling Warner film which forces itself into a second week at the Paramount and Uptown because of its appeal with resultant tremendous business. For the sweet lass, we have Sally Blane, looking for all the world like her entrancing sister, Loretta Young. She flashes into the career of Paul Muni without serious effect upon his future. He has been through the great war—perhaps women meant less after his inferno at Belleau Wood. Enters Noel Francis, wanton, recking not of fate around the corner; then the smooth-working Glenda Farrell, turning in a stellar job as she pins Muni on the spot as a nifty "meal ticket." Last of all, Helen Vinson, whose roles, as you will recall, have been minor, but who is talented enough to see her own name in lights.

Miss Vinsen is an intelligent actress, much after the Elissa Landi type. Born in Texas, she came into favor in Broadway stage productions; then the Warners reached out and signed her up. Muni is, of course, the outstanding personality in this notable camera achievement; but Miss Vinson makes her sequence intensely interesting by her sympathetic attack on her lines and her gesturing.

"I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang" is one of the few American pictures which has the sure, deft points of direction such as the Russians best attain. Audiences don't often pay much attention to directors of the pictures they enjoy; but Mervyn LeRoy ought to get a hand just as loud as that accorded Muni.

Exeter Theater

Richard Dix in "Hell's Highway, and Clive Brook, Lila Lee in "Night of June 13th" are the attractions at the Exeter for the remainder of the week.

Tremont Temple

Tony Sarg's Marionettes come to Tremont Temple November 25 and 26 in "Sinbad, the Sailor." The puppet melodrama has vivid oriental settings, tableaus of a shipwreck at sea with novel mechanical effects, the adventures of Sinbad with the pirates and under the sea with man-eating sharks.

New Contract for Lupe Velez Is Unique

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Nov. 17—Here's something perfectly new in the way of contracts. At least, the contracts given Lupe Velez and Buddy Rogers by M-G-M are unique so far as I know. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer reserves the right, or shall we say privilege, of sending Lupe and Buddy on personal appearance tours 25 per cent of the time of the contract.

Louella O. Parsons

Lupe is as valuable on the stage as she is on the screen, and I think we can say the same for Buddy. Possibly that shrewd young person, Irving Thalberg took that into consideration when he signed them.

I doubt very much if the personal appearance angle will enter into other contracts for there are very, very few screen folk who can sing and dance as well as the Mexican firecracker or who have the musical talents that are Buddy Rogers.

* * *

Writers Sign Up

Don't for a split second think that Paramount is parting with the writers now on the lot. Bayard Veiller and Maurine Watkins today put their John Hancocks on a contract. Miss Watkins is getting 'Sanctuary' ready for Miriam Hopkins and from all I was able to gather big conferences are being held to determine whether Josef von Sternberg or Rouben Mamoulian will direct the Hopkins. The hatchet being buried great effort is being made to give her the right break and push her forward as a Para[illegible] star. Bayard is writing the adaptation of "Passage to Paradise" and, by the way, I heard tell that Nancy Carroll and Cary Grant will step into the [illegible].

[illegible]atter [illegible] Hollywood

Imagine the surprise of the Malibutes to see Charlie Laughton appear with manicured toenails on one foot and the other au naturel. The Malibutes weren't any more surprised than Mr. Laughton was embarassed. Seems in Cecil De Mille's "Sign of the Cross" he had to make a scene [illegible] his toe-nails being polished. Mr. Laughton didn't know how to get the polish off, and nobody told him about a polish remover. Finally, in despair, he [illegible] that almost burned his feet off.

A Line or Two:

Kay Francis just has to cut that New York trip short and come back to work. It might pay her to scrape up an acquaintance with Roscoe Turner, who made the trip to Los Angeles in 12 hours and 33 minutes. She spends so much time getting back and forth the saved time might be valuable. Mike Curtiz will direct Kay, who emotes opposite George Brent in "Keyhole." The fans are protesting. They want Brent with Ruth Chatterton and William Powell with Kay Francis. It's a long, long way from the Ufa studios in Germany to Hollywood. That is where I saw Heather Angel playing in an English version. Now she is coming to the Fox studios to make a picture. Ursula Jans, whom I saw at Gaumont in London, is now on the Fox lot and she isn't eating as she was recommended to do to put on weight. Why should she when she has a gorgeous figure? Not such a hot publicity stunt to try to wish food on her. Don Dilloway, in case you're interested, is on the Warner Brothers' lot in "The Mind Reader," also Clarence Muse and Allen Jenkis.

JERITZA IS SUPERB

Opera Star's Performance in "Cavalleria Rusticana" Wins Great Applause

By MOSES SMITH

The appearance of Maria Jeritza in the principal role of "Cavalleria Rusticana" at the Boston Opera House last night wrought a transformation over the engagement of the San Carlo Company.

Instead of a small selection of music lovers come to hear opera regardless of what the critics say, there was last night a huge audience—not quite filling the theater, it is true, for even Jeritza at popular prices apparently cannot overcome the prejudice of lofty browed Bostonians to the effect that the San Carlo is a "turkey" company. The audience even attracted a representation of "society," that is to say those people who can afford to pay $7 for this privilege of coming late to the opera. (Therefore one could scarcely expect most of them to turn out when $3 would buy an orchestra seat.)

As it happened Jeritza justified artistically as well as financially Fortune Gallo's bold stroke. For she was a great Santuzza, vocally as different from herself in her few meagerly successful concert appearances here in the past as day is from night. For now her voice was warm, opulent in resource, intensely dramatic, capable at the singer's will (and she wielded it perhaps too frequently) of letting loose a flood of tone. Even more remarkable was her acting, which engrossed the spectator as in no performance of Mascagni's work within memory. Of course it was melodramatic, but so is "Cavalleria." Little wonder that Mme. Jeritza was greeted by extraordinary applause such as has not sounded in the house in a long while.

Perhaps Mme. Jeritza served as the spark that lent incandescence to the other elements in the performance, which was splendid. Yet the mettle of the company was shown when immediately afterward it put on a [illegible] version of "Pagliacci," featured by Mostyn Thomas' [illegible] prologue and Aroldo Lindi's magnificent singing of the music of Canio. It would have been highly edifying for some of our high-browed friends had they not walked out immediately after the opening "Cavalleria."

Hollywood Notes

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Who wins the brass figure this year? Now I don't mean to be facetious, but everyone is wondering who will carry off the statuette for the best acting honors of the year on the screen. Helen Hayes is in a pretty good spot for her work in "Sin of Madelon Claudet." That is the the most talked of picture from the standpoint of dramatic acting. I can hardly think that Lynn Fontanne, who made the one picture and who has not any great popularity with the fans throughout the country, will carry off the prize. Wallace Beery and Fredric March rate pretty high in favoritism, but why make any prophecies? It's much more fun to be surprised.

* * *

What happened to Clark Gable when Miriam Hopkins walked out of the picture "No Man of Her Own"? Well, Clark showed no temperament and remained in the picture with Carole Lombard. He could have kicked up a row too, but he is a pretty sensible chap and he isn't taking any chances with his career.

How Do Dancers Manage?

The professional engagements of a dancer make no allowance for the time of month when she may be helpless with pain. Her periodic discomfort must not interfere with her easy, effortless performance. Such women do not "fight" periodic pain but avoid it. They use Midol and do not suffer even a twinge of periodic pain. Why don't you meet these monthly emergencies with this remarkable modern discovery.

Midol takes pain off the calendar. Monthly martyrdom is foolish. For Midol is as harmless as the aspirin tablet you take for your headache! All drug stores; just ask for Midol.

What $16,000 buys in The American Weekly

A full page in color more than twice the size of any other magazine page in the world . . . 5,500,000 families at a cost of less than ⅓ cent per family . . . The attention of the entire family instead of a single buying factor.

IN times like these, the manufacturer who waits in the woods for the world to beat a path to his door, is a great optimist.

But the manufacturer who shows his "mousetraps" to the world keeps the smoke coming out of his chimney.

To make sales in volume today the manufacturer must reach buyers in volume and the magazine which has proved itself most effective for that purpose is The American Weekly.

Every Sunday this Mighty Magazine crosses the threshold of 5,500,000 homes located in the richest buying areas of the nation—the big cities and the small towns as well.

No other publication on earth offers such tremendous coverage or reaches as many people per advertising dollar.

A color page in The American Weekly, twice as big as any other magazine page, costs $16,000.

Divide that sum by 5,500,000 and you get an amazingly low figure, less than ⅓ cent per family reached.

Advertisers who use this magazine get double action for their money.

They get action from the dealer because he knows The American Weekly creates action with the consumer.

The American Weekly gets action from its readers because it is the most interesting magazine in the world.

Every issue contains something of extraordinary interest to every member of every household it visits.

People are interested in people and The American Weekly presents stories from the lives of actresses, society folk, kings and queens—their loves, their romances and their tragedies.

For the more seriously inclined, it presents authoritative and informative articles on astronomy, archaeology, religion, natural history, philosophy, biology, psychology.

For the adventurous, tours are conducted to lands beyond the horizon where strange people live and love and die according to other codes and customs.

Romance is served in absorbing serial novels from the pens of famous authors.

Fashions, household hints and the culinary art—each is treated in these varied pages.

That's why every member of every family sees the advertising in The American Weekly and that's why this magazine gets action when it shows your "mousetraps" to the world.

Where this Magazine goes

The American Weekly is the largest magazine in the world. It is distributed through 17 great Sunday Newspapers. In 558 of America's 995 towns and cities of 10,000 population and over, The American Weekly concentrates 70% of its circulation.

In each of 136 cities, it reaches one out of every two families
In 105 more cities, 40 to 50% of the families
In an additional 153 cities, 30 to 40%
In another 164 cities, 20 to 30%

. . . and, in addition, more than 1,750,000 families in thousands of other communities, large and small, regularly buy and read The American Weekly.

Where can you spend your advertising dollar more effectively?

THIS IS LIFE

Children's Book Week---Just a Reminder to the Parents

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

This week is Children's Book Week. This month celebrates the 100th anniversary of the birth of Louisa M. Alcott of Concord, the author of one of the most famous books for young people ever published. I was listening the other afternoon over the radio to that simple and kindly and wise critic and writer, story teller and naturalist, Walter Pritchard Eaton. He said, among other things, that in the Newark public library there are 159 copies of "Little Women" and that all of them are "out" all the time. Because, the children say, the people in it are real.

R. E. ROGERS

Mr. Eaton in his human way said that he was not going to urge his listeners to read any particular books. The chief thing, he suggested, is to read. The wise parent will not urge his children to read particular books. Nor will he forbid the child to read particular books—though that advice is perhaps more applicable to the books of the past than to many of the books of the present. But he will urge the child to read, knowing that in a good book every child can create his own Hollywood and live in a world of his own imagination.

Bit of Advice to Mothers

I received a letter the other day from a mother who asked me for a list of books suitable for a boy of 13, who, I gather, does not read much. That is the hardest sort of question to answer. I don't know the boy. I know nothing of his tastes. It may be that he is an out-of-doors boy to whom reading is something of an imposition or a task. In that case I shouldn't try to hurry him.

I should let him alone until he wants to read. To a boy of any intelligence that time will come but some children are precocious and others are a little backward. An only child will probably be more of a reader than will a member of a large and active family. But even in such a family you will be almost sure to find one who prefers to creep away with a book than to play with the crowd. But sooner or later all normal children will arrive at the point when they will want to read. If there are books around the house, ready for them to pick up, the time may come more quickly than it otherwise would.

We all have a peculiar affection for the books we read when we ourselves were young. But it does not always do to recommend those books to our children. As Bernard Shaw said about the Golden Rule, "Do not unto others as you would have them do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same." A single generation makes a good many books out of date, old fashioned, particularly if they are books of only topical or temporary interest.

If I wanted to interest a child in historical romances which most normal children enjoy, I shouldn't attempt to force "Ivanhoe" on him or "The Tale of Two Cities," or even the Henty books of my own boyhood. I should try rather whether I couldn't get him interested in Kenneth Roberts's "Arundel" or "The Lively Lady," written in our own time about the romantic past of American Life. Incidentally, Mr. Roberts writes me that he has another novel on the stocks, covering the period between Arnold's expedition to Quebec ("Arundel") and the War of 1812 ("The Lively Lady"). Or I should suggest to them James Boyd's "Drums" and "Marching Men," simple, realistic human tales of the Revolution and the Civil War.

Exploration Tales Good for Boys

It is a pity, I think, for boys to get too much into the habit of reading those very elementary stories about young heroes who adventure with racing airplanes and submarine boats and electric rifles and extraordinary radio sets and that sort of thing. The science in them is usually speculative, the adventures are a bit too steep, and the human element pretty thin and unreal. The craze for mystery stories and detective yarns among grown-ups has set the juvenile writers to confecting similar but harmless yarns for young people. Most of them I have read are pretty slim reading. Most juveniles of today seem to me to be lacking precisely where Louisa M. Alcott was so strong, in the human element, in the depiction of real people doing real things. For that sort of story can be just as immediately fascinating as stories of mere adventure and far more likely to demand a re-reading.

Such books as young David Putnam's own stories about his experiences in the Arctic are more real than any synthetic adventure can possibly be. Stories of exploration are good for young boys, such as Donald MacMillan's books and the new book by Dr. Grenfell telling of his life in Labrador ("Forty Years for Labrador," Houghton & Mifflin). Lindbergh's "We" is still more interesting than any other book about flying, unless perhaps the girls will prefer Amelia Earhart's new book about herself. And since the airplane is the most interesting development of modern engineering to the average boy, he will want to know about its history in the amusing and popularly written book called "Sky High" by Hodgins and Magoun (Little Brown Co.).

The old "Youth's Companion" opened the literary door to the young people of one, two, and three generations ago with the stories of Stevens, who wrote so interestingly of Maine and to whom Mr. Eaton confessed a deep personal debt. The old "St. Nicholas" with the stories of Mary Mapes Dodge and Frank Stockton did the same thing for the older children. Today there is "The Open Road," a young people's magazine published in Boston, as well as "The American Boy," which recently inherited the tradition and good will of "The Youth's Companion." The right sort of a magazine for young people is perhaps the best means to ease a youngster who does not seem eager to read into a habit of reading. If the magazine is any good, it will be looked for every month and the habit will be established. Once it is established, the rest is easy.

Main Thing Is to Read

I suggest these rather than the adult "story" magazines, the wood pulp publications, the "westerns," the detective thrillers or the gangster yarns. Most of these are pretty tawdry and sensational stuff. Better the magazines written and edited for children by people with some sense of responsibility. Even though the writing in these is nowhere as mature as it was twenty or thirty years ago, and nowhere near so nourishing to the mind and spirit, it at least deals with normal life and not its crimes and sensations.

But, as Mr. Eaton said, "The main thing is to read." That is the conclusion of the whole matter. For there is no person quite so pathetic as the adult who never grew up, that is, who never learned to enjoy reading, who cannot bear to be thrown on his resources but must always be seeing a movie or playing bridge or dancing or going places and doing things. A pretty spare and meager life lacking the enrichment of good books. Our world is full of such people. Technically they may not be illiterate, but actually they might as well be. For they have never learned how to read!

Federal agents were then informed about Jackson who claimed to be a Montreal doctor. They want to investigate his presence in this country as well as that of Miss Vaisanen, who is also said to be an alien.

Jackson was held in $2500 and the girl in $500.

Jackson's story of being a Montreal physician was scorned by Dr Staples, attached to the court, who after a few questions, declared Jackson's knowledge of medicine to be negligible.

EUROPE MUST PAY U. S. DEBTS, DECLARES POMERENE

CANCELLATION WOULD PROVE BURDEN TO NATION, HE ADDS

Cancellation of foreign debts would mean increasing the tax [illegible] of the American people to a considerable extent, Chairman Atlee Pomerene of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. declared in an exclusive interview with the Boston Evening American. Chairman Pomerene arrived here today to be principal speaker at the opening session of the New England conference at Hotel Statler under auspices of the New England Council.

"I am unqualifiedly opposed to cancellation of the foreign debts," the Finance Corporation chairman asserted. "When the several European commissions came here after the World War was over, they pleaded with our government to finance them.

FRENCH PLEDGE CITED

"The French government particularly—now the most insistent on cancellation of the debt—asked us at the time to finance them, and said that they knew we did not have the money in the Treasury but would have to borrow it from our people, and they said they would gladly repay us the money thus borrowed, in order that we might pay it back to our people.

"After the Armistice and the debt commissions had been here, the French statesmen and papers said we ought not to insist on them paying their debt because France financed the Thirteen Colonies during the Revolutionary War and we never paid them.

"This statement was a great surprise to us. We investigated at the Treasury and the books disclosed not only that we had paid the principal that France had loaned us, but also the interest. This was discussed at the time by Senator Borah in the Senate. I do not have the figures before me, but the amount for which we accepted France's final obligations was about the same we loaned to France after the armistice was signed; perhaps it was a little more. These debts are both legal debts and debts of honor.

BRITAIN DIFFERENT

"A different attitude was evidenced by a British statesman visiting in Cleveland a few years ago. He was complimented by his host because of the promptness with which Great Britain had settled its debt. He replied: 'We don't deserve your compliment. Great Britain settled for two reasons: first, because it owed it, and second, because it was good policy to settle it.'

"The people of France are said to be in better condition than the people in other European nations. Our government has ten billions of foreign war obligations outstanding. They are supposed to be an asset in our Treasury. If paid they will relieve our people to that extent from additional taxation. If not paid, or if forgiven, we must increase the great burden now bearing down on our people to just that extent.

"We must be just to our people before we become generous to foreign peoples. Go into any State in the Union and you will find delinquent taxes everywhere, because our people have not the money with which to pay.

TRADE THEORY FALSE

"I don't mean to be disrespectful, but it is a piece of impertinence for the European people to ask us to cancel the debts they owe.

"It has been said that we will increase foreign trade with them if that is done, but bear in mind they will buy our goods only when it is to their advantage to do so. In continental Europe they are constantly levying taxes with which to pay for armament and not to pay off debts. Let them put their own house in order before asking further favors from the United States.

"Constantly they cry 'Shylock,' but will any student of history tell me there is anyone who pursues the almighty dollar more than the people of Europe do? When these European countries show half the generosity to us that we have shown to them, it will be time to show them further favors.

"If the United States government has charity to bestow, give it to our own people, not to other countries.

"Certainly the international bankers have been advocating cancellation of foreign debts because they say it will increase our foreign markets abroad, but has anyone heard of any international banker cancelling foreign bonds they have in their portfolios?

"If they are interested so much in foreign trade, let them prove their faith by cancelling their own bonds."

COURT HOLDS 2 IN SAFE BREAK

Frank Hall, 32, of Division st., and John Newman, 23, of Bloomfield st., Chelsea, were arraigned in Chelsea court today on charges of breaking and entering, larceny and possession burglar's tools.

Their arrest followed an anonymous note to Chelsea police accusing Hall, watchman for a Chelsea milk company, and Newman, a friend, of being implicated in a $2700 robbery at the milk plant.

The robbery took place Sept. 19 when Hall said he was trussed up by three armed men who looted the safe.

The case was continued to Nov. 30. Bail was set at $8000.

The society prosecuted 12 cases of cruelty and obtained eight convictions. Over 3000 new members were enrolled in the Jack London Club, which is opposed to cruelty to trained animals.

2 More Give to Aid Family in East Boston

Two more contributions to help a bit in relieving the plight of Mrs. Katherine Mortimer of Homer st., East Boston, were received today by the Boston Evening American.

When Mrs. Mortimer's daughter Marianna, 9, was struck by a hit-and-run driver it was learned that a baby son was burned to death two months ago, that the father is dying at City Hospital and that the destitute mother had lost the job that supported the family.

W. A. Ryan of Dorchester forwarded $1 and a similar amount was sent in by Mrs. F. J. Hughes of 845 Parkway, Revere, who said she had read of Mrs. Mortimer's plight in the Boston American.

Dorchester High Alumni to Dance

Members of the Alumni Association of the Dorchester High School for Boys, will hold their annual reunion and dance tomorrow evening in Whiton Hall, Dorchester.

Daniel J. Pierce, head of the committee in charge, says more than 400 will attend. Others on the committee include John J. Walsh, David Brickman, Julian B. Tobias, David Lurensky, Stephen J. Manookian, Curtiss S. Collins, Frank Donnellan, Paul Russo, Joseph Lehherz, George M. Drooker and Eugene F. Murphy.

FIGHTS HIS SUIT, FILES HER OWN

Two weeks ago, Loretta Smack Segrini of Dorchester appeared in Suffolk Probate Court to fight her husband's suit for annulment of their marriage. Today it was learned that Mrs. Segrini had filed a suit for divorce for cruel and abusive treatment.

Loretta married Angelo Segrini in August, 1931. Segrini, in his suit for annulment, charged that his wife was already married at the time.

Loretta admitted that she had married Herbert Cook in Brooklyn in 1929, but that marriage was annulled because Cook then had a wife. It is understood that Mrs. Segrini will drop the annulment fight and that Segrini will not contest the divorce petition.

HOOVER WIRES PRAISE TO N. E. COUNCIL

Telegram Read as 500 Business Men Meet in Their Eighth Annual Session

In an atmosphere laden with optimism, over 500 business and agricultural leaders from the six New England States gathered in the Hotel Statler today in the eighth New England Conference to discuss how better to speed up New England's progress along the road of complete economic recovery.

The governors of the [illegible] New England states attended the executive session which preceded the formal opening of the conference. All were listed to address the conference this afternoon.

President Hoover sent the following message which was read to the conference:

"I am glad to learn of the program of the Eighth New England Conference.

"This administration has always welcomed an opportunity to co-operate with the constructive work of the New England Council. I am sure that the plans you are developing for New England's participation in and co-operation with business rehabilitation will be very helpful.

"I should like to congratulate the council on its accomplishments in the past and wish for it the very best success in the future."

After the executive session the six governors were guests at a luncheon attended by the directors of the council.

POMERENE HITS BANKS.

Atlee Pomerene, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., following Gov. Ely's address, gave a vigorous speech, in which he said that if he had the power, every solvent merchant would be obliged to buy one-third more goods this year to put men back to work.

"Were this policy adopted," Pomerene said, "buying power would be enhanced and men and women would be employed again."

Pomerene also attacked liquid banks which refuse to make loans when proper security is offered.

"Every bank which denies loans to business and industry when the bank itself is solvent, is a parasite in the community, and deserves the condemnation of every thinking man and women," Pomerene continued.

"The money in their vaults belongs to the people who put it there."

Pomerene also said certain banks would like to repeal the Reconstruction Finance Corporation act in order to have the entire country at their mercy.

He suggested that an acceptance by workers of a reasonable wage cut would also help recovery.

Tonight the delegates will discuss with their governors their own special problems and elect state directors.

ST. LAWRENCE DEBATE

Probably the most interesting discussion on tomorrow's program will be on the proposed development of the St. Lawrence river. This discussion will closely resemble a debate, with Henry I. Harriman, former president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, giving reasons why New England should support the project and Henry F. Merrill, president of board of directors of the port of Portland, telling why New England should oppose it.

Urge Change in Kenmore Sq. Traffic

For the first time in the history of the traffic commission, a sitting opened today with a round of applause for Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman, but the rippling spirit of harmony failed to bring a change in traffic regulations at Kenmore station.

Chairman Joseph A. Conry was seated at the table with Commissioners Theodore A. Glynn and Joseph A. Rourke when Hultman, who is also on the board, crossed the threshold.

"Here comes the genial police commissioner," announced Conry, clapping his hands. The applause was taken up by the other commissioners and by members of the Kenmore Square Lions Club.

OBJECT TO RULES

The meeting was called [illegible] Henry Rosnosky, president of the Lions Club, and [illegible], chairman of the traffic committee of the Kenmore Square [illegible], to suggest traffic changes.

They objected to the [illegible] under which Deerfield st. [illegible] was thoroughfare, and [illegible] motorists entering [illegible] from Brookline ave. [illegible] right inbound and [illegible] Charlesgate west [illegible] side of Commonwealth av. [illegible] wish to go west [illegible] Commonwealth.

They wanted also [illegible] traffic pause for pedestrians [illegible] ng out of every hotel.

UNDER ADVISEMENT

Commissioner Conry explained that there is a subway under Commonwealth ave. for pedestrians. When Rosnosky continued to insist on changes in the Kenmore sq. regulations, Conry asked if Rosnosky's place of business was in Kenmore sq.

Rosnosky replied that it was Oliver st., downtown.

"Well, how are the traffic conditions down that way?" asked Conry.

"The police service is very good," said Rosnosky.

The traffic chairman turned to his secretary and said:

"Put that in the record, Miss Mayer."

The meeting ended when the traffic board took under advisement the suggested change.

Increase Shown in Building Trades Jobs

A slight improvement in building trades is revealed in a report issued today by the State Department of Labor and Industries. A total of 774 contractors reported the number of men employed in October was 6007, an increase of 107 or 1.8 per cent compared with September.

Destroyer Arrives Here for Overhauling

The U. S. S. Dupont, a destroyer, arrived at Boston Navy Yard from the west coast today for an overhauling expected to require several days. When work on her is completed there is a possibility that some of the 1400 now employed at the yard will be laid off until specifications arrive for the new destroyer to be built here.

THREE METHODS CITED FOR CHANGE

Congressman Plans New Fight on League After Repeal Assured

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

[illegible] high as [illegible] per cent [illegible] [illegible] Volstead Act.

Such was the [illegible] expressed today by Congressman George Holden Tinkham.

[illegible]

"A remarkable victory is won," said Tinkham. "Prohibition is done. The idea has been defeated overwhelmingly. Now there remains only the mode or pattern of dispatching it.

"Congress can provide by law, in my judgment, that liquors in excess of 25 per cent alcoholic content shall be illegal. Action could not then be successfully taken against any lower percentage.

"I believe the Supreme Court would say, as it said in effect in the medicinal beer case, Congress has not said that anything below 25 per cent is illegal. Congress has not exhausted its authority in this matter and the court will not act upon the assumption of what Congress could and may do in the future.

COULD STOP ENFORCEMENT

"Of course, the simple expedient is to alter the Volstead Act by declaring the legality of 4 per cent beer. The question of how beer should be manufactured and sold should be left to the discretion of the states.

"The third method would be to withhold appropriations for enforcement, to eliminate the spies and wire-tapping. Courts are not going to sentence readily in the future. Juries will be more hesitant than ever to convict. This amounts to nullification, and in that I am not interested. I want the clean-cut battle, such as I have waged in the past 14 years."

Tinkham was asked if beer and wine through modification of the Volstead Act would come in [illegible]

"I don't know," he said. "There are only a few working days of Congress at best. Matters of fundamental political principle are rarely settled in the short session. Congress could amend the Volstead Act in 24 hours if it were so disposed. But Borah, or any other man who wanted to stand on his feet, could also prevent action by filibuster.

TO FIGHT LEAGUE

"When I say that beer and wine can be had within five months from the day Congress sets itself to the task, I have in mind a special session of Congress to be called by the new President with a new set of Congressmen, who at least know they have a direct mandate from the people."

Tinkham was happy in the extraordinary victory he achieved. Although a Republican and without making a single campaign speech, he carried the Democratic district by the largest majority of his 18 years of service, obtaining more votes than either Roosevelt or Ely.

"I am going to dedicate myself to a new battle," he said, "the second battle of Bunker Hill—the battle against internationalism.

"We must fight against the League of Nations. We must prevent our country from being enmeshed in the League Court. We must do away with the Kellogg Pact in order that we may not be drawn into the wars of the world in the name of 'peace.'

"For 41 years I have lived a broad life. I have circumnavigated this globe. I have been from Greenland to the Cape of Good Hope. I know from my own experiences that the world hates us. It is a hate of envy.

AGAINST ENTANGLEMENTS

"We should have political alliances with none of the nations. We should be independent of, but on friendly terms with all of them, that is, on such friendly terms as they desire and we can accept without the loss of our self respect.

"The fight against prohibition was a fight for the morals and morale of our people. The fight against entangling alliances is a fight for the independence of our country."

[illegible] Washington [illegible] It's got to be won, and it's going to be won."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1932 C.M. Co.

The more you demand of a motor car, the quicker you come to Atlantic WHITE FLASH

Coasting up a hill? Well, not literally; but the sensation is much the same, with Atlantic WHITE FLASH in the tank. For hill-climbing is one of the achievements of the WHITE FLASH formula. What driver is there who does not blush to see another car pass him on the long pull? And isn't gear-shifting embarrassing, and engine-knocking expensive? Atlantic WHITE FLASH is truly a super-fuel at regular-gas price. It does not offer one feature at the expense of all others. It is a balanced, full-range, full-powered fuel for all motors and all weathers. There are technical reasons for its superiority, of course. But you can take the word of those who say: "The more you demand of a motor car, the quicker you come to Atlantic WHITE FLASH."

And her first attack had come on during the wedding trip, an agonizing escape.

Later she found that anything remarkably distasteful to her might occasion these attacks. It was shortly before Lennox was born that she'd found George out. The seizure which had [illegible] then was prolonged [illegible] than the others. She had frightened him thoroughly but for once she had failed in her desired effect. He had been sullen rather than repentant, voluble with the most extraordinary shameless excuses. He had blamed her openly for his misconduct.

The doctor had said the first child must be her last. If the heart attacks had not served to keep George Sheldon on the path of rectitude they had at least assisted in freeing his wife gradually from bondage.

She relaxed, closed her eyes and slept. Nanna stole quietly from the room.

In the morning Nanna had something of last night's story from Lennox. Later she approached Mrs. Sheldon by roundabout measures.

Mrs. Sheldon remained aloof.

"It is not the thing itself, you understand—but the tendencies I see in him."

Nanna spoke out bravely. Louisa had subdued but never quite conquered her.

"He's alone too much—not near enough with the other boys. He mews himself up over books, comes straight home from school, days. It can't be good for him, it's not in nature."

Louisa said nothing then. She thought over her plans, and compromised. Lennox entering Columbia at seventeen, never knew that he owed this realization of a relinquished dream to a graph[illegible]ne and Sally.

NO LATCHKEY

Lennox was not permitted a latchkey. He did not find this restriction particularly awkward until his second year at college when, having become a member of an excellent fraternity, he discovered the drawbacks of such an example of maternal leading-strings. One night, getting in rather late, he stood at the top step and regarded the street door intently, holding a slightly vinous breath. This was the second time he had been so late. On the first occasion he had rung the bell and Nanna had opened to him, yawning, a flannel wrapper flung over her night things. He had started up the stairs and his mother had met at the top of the first flight. He did not get to bed until an hour later.

This time his hand hesitated at the bell. To his astonishment before he had gathered up his courage the door opened itself, as if by magic. He walked in and saw Nanna. She whispered huskily, "I [illegible] for you, Master Lennox. No need to ring."

She glanced up the dim stairs. One light burned. The marble Mercury slept in his corner. No tall [illegible] figure was illuminated. Nanna and Lennox [illegible] simultaneous sighs of relief.

In the next thrilling installment Lennox is smuggled a latchkey by Nanna.

"A MAN MUST FIGHT"

By Gene Tunney

SYNOPSIS

Thus far the author has described his strenuous boyhood New York fight club activities, and battles paving the way toward the A. E. F. ring championships in France. Office boy, ship company rate clerk, life saver and now a full-fledged U. S. Marine, Tunney travels to Paris for fame and glory"... winning the light-heavy title on April 26, 1919. "Decides to defeat Dempsey some day" Smiles... laughs ... Gene returns to the U. S., is discharged and, "broke," resumes training, retaining Billy Roche as his manager when Sammy Kelly leaves for Havana. During winter of 1919-20, Tunney fought Dan O'Dowd a hard, no-decision bout and knocked out Bob Pierce, Whitey Allen, Al Roberts and K. O. Sullivan.

By GENE TUNNEY

In the early spring of 1920 Sammy Kelly returned from Havana and finding that I had become fairly well established, naturally wanted to resume his managerial interests in me. I did not think this quite fair to Billy Roche and on my telling him so, Sammy agreed to become jointly-interested with Billy Roche in the management of my affairs. I thought this a very fair proposition and took it to Billy. Much to my surprise Billy turned it down, saying that he would not share with anyone in the management of a fighter.

He said, "Gene, I do not do things that way. I either take full charge of the management of the fighter or not at all. I understand your agreement with Kelly; you must go back to him. I expect to go into partnership with a friend and open a theatrical booking agency; this will keep me busier than I want to be. Good luck to you!" Billy and I have been friends since.

Shortly after Sammy again took up the job of managing my pugilistic affairs. I realized he had too many other interests to look after me properly. He had many irons in the fire besides his steady employment with Charles A. Stoneham & Company and his race-track interests. We talked the thing over and upon my showing Sammy that his many important interests would conflict with his duty toward me, he agreed to turn me over to whatever manager I named.

Tunney, in 1920, soon after his return from abroad with the troops at close of the World War.

Upon leaving him I thought over the various managers I knew, and would have decided on Frank "Doc" Bagley immediately, had I not remembered the incident of his demonstration of patriotism when he agreed to change his cut from 33 1-3 to 25 per cent the night before I left for service and, incidentally, kept the $2.50. As a matter of fact, there would have been no hesitancy whatever about my going back with Bagley on my return from France had I been able to forget this incident. Had I done so I undoubtedly would have been saved many unhappy moments while looking for a fight during those first few months after my discharge.

However, I had watched Bagley in the meantime and believed he was competent and accordingly made excuses for his exhibition of "patriotism." I believe Bagley to be the outstanding manager of my acquaintance: I had a personal liking for him, and decided to go up to Harlem and see him.

Upon my stating my case, Bagley expressed his willingness to handle my affairs for 25 per cent. Accordingly a verbal contract was agreed upon.

BOTH HANDS OUT

The following day Sammy Kelly called me on the telephone to tell me he had reconsidered the matter and would like me to go along under the old agreement, which had been verbal. I informed him of the new agreement entered into with Bagley, and said I did not believe I could do anything about it as my word had been given. Kelly engaged Charles A. Stoneham's lawyer, who sent me a letter threatening me with action for breach of contract.

This made me angry and unfortunately I wrote Sammy a rather sharp letter. I heard no more from the lawyer. Sammy developed an imaginary grievance. I do not believe he ever forgave me. Despite our misunderstanding, I always had great affection for Sammy Kelly.

"Doc" Bagley got busy immediately and in a month's time I had engaged in three matches. Things went along very well until my hands began to crack up. The old damage to the middle knuckle of my right hand, that I had injured in France, reappeared. I was entering matches now with a terrific handicap: my punch was leaving me. I was no longer able to hit with reckless abandon. I had to think of my hands and cautiously pick my spots. Many of my admirers began to lose confidence in me. The boxing writers were commenting on my reversal of form.

Finally—in a contest against Leo Houck in the Jersey City armory—in addition to increasing the injury to my right hand, I broke my left thumb as Houck blocked with an elbow a blow aimed at his body. Here I was in the fourth round of a ten-round bout with both hands practically useless. By luck I happened to hit Houck on the temple with my right, putting him down for a nine count in the ninth round.

I could not use either hand after this. In the tenth round of that match I realized that I had gone away back in fighting form. I knew the cause. I had a clear demonstration of the old axiom, "A fighter is as good as his hands." I determined to get out of boxing altogether until my hands got back into shape.

I had been considering going to a lumber camp. Now I was determined to do so.

I left the ring amidst the jeers and hoots of the spectators, depressed about my showing, but determined never to fight again until I was fit.

A JOB IN MAINE

When my fractured hand permitted I left for Algonquin Park, Ontario, to join a lumber company there. I tramped through the woods, swung an ax, ate the food cooked over an open fire and did exactly what each member of the camp was required to do. We got up at 5 o'clock, had breakfast, awaited dawn. Then out on the snowy trail we went with axes and saws so that we would be at our jobs when there was sufficient daylight to cut timber. I remained at this camp until it broke up in the spring.

Upon returning to New York, I was convinced that my hands had not had sufficient work, so by arrangement through a friend, I went up to Poland Spring, Me., to work as a laborer. I remained here until the latter part of June, 1921.

Jim Bryan, who was instrumental in my going up to Poland Spring, was one of the soldiers whom I had met in 1917 while working for the J. G. White Engineering Corp at Erie Pier No. 2. Jim has been an immeasurable influence in my life. His friendship has been dependable and steadfast. His is the enthusiastic quality of spirit and nature that is very rare.

When I returned to New York from Poland Spring, I saw Jim and confided to him that, though I was not yet quite sure whether my hands would stand the strain of fighting, I had decided to leave Poland Spring because I had become very slow from the heavy work I was required to do. Shovelling coal occasionally from 7 a. m. to 5.30 p. m. was part of the work.

Jim offered to finance a private camp in Maine, where I could cut trees and at the same time do enough gym and road work to keep myself in fairly good boxing condition. Jim had visions of me as champion one day. He wanted nothing to interfere. Naturally, I could not accept his offer. I felt it would be better to take the chance of fighting.

AT BOYLE'S 30 ACRES

Accordingly "Doc" Bagley matched me with Young Ambrose on June 29, 1921, at the Pioneer Athletic Club in New York.

This, by the way, was my first fight in my home town since 1917. Ambrose was a stocky fellow with a heavy jaw, which made a beautiful target. The first shot I let go with my increased weight (now weighed 189 pounds) and strength knocked Ambrose into a somersault. He was counted out. My hands did not get a real test, however.

Bagley persuaded Tex Rickard to put me in a semifinal match at the Dempsey-Carpentier fight, which was three days later at Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City. My opponent was Soldier Jones of Canada. Though the referee stopped the contest to save Jones from further punishment, it was a sorry exhibition that I gave at Boyle's Thirty Acres that afternoon. It was particularly disappointing to me because of the number of people who saw it.

I found my extra fourteen pounds, after the first round, a most difficult load to carry around. I was so slow that I could not get out of my own way, much less out of the way of the wild swings that Jones was pitching at me, several of which landed on either side of my jaw in the first round. Had I not possessed a tough chin I am convinced that my career would have ignominiously ended that day before the 90,000 spectators who were forced to sit through our spectacle while waiting for Georges and Jack to start their "Battle of the Century."

Tomorrow, Tunney will tell of his own disappointment over his showing against Soldier Jones, how Jimmy Eagleton and Harry F. McCormack did much to help re-establish him as a boxer, and how "Doc" Bagley launched effective publicity campaign in 1921-22.

Daily True Story

The Way of Love

"YOU'RE POSITIVELY distracting, Jack Archer. You've quarreled with me all the way to the theater and now that you are here everything seems to please you about as much as it did before you left home."

"Well, who wouldn't be?" Archer retorted. "I write, rewrite, sweat, fret and worry for six months over a play that is ten times better than the thing we're forced to sit through tonight. But what does your uncle, Mr. Frisby, do when I ask him for a hearing?

"Why, simply this: he sends [illegible] out to his office [illegible] instructions to turn [illegible] on the mat upside [illegible]. And now you drag me [illegible] because dear old Uncle Frisby decides to produce this play [illegible]. And because he has sent you two tickets for the opening. I repeat that the first act of the play I tore up was better than this whole thing put together."

"Sh-h-h! There's the overture. Try getting interested, won't you, Jack. I just feel that you are going to get a surprise this time."

"Don't you think that music is divine? What is the melody they are playing?"

"How should I know. I haven't even got a program."

"And, oh, Jack, there's Briggs, the leading man. Really, he's adorable!"

FAMILIAR PLAY

"Yes, he is good. But listen, Betty, there's something familiar about this darn thing."

"Familiar, what do you mean?" Betty asked.

"Well, I don't know. The scenes are laid in the same spot that I laid them in the play I tore up. And the action and the dialogue sound very much like mine—"

"Nonsense! You just imagine it because you have a grouch on Uncle Frisby. Don't be that way. Look, there's the curtain for the second act!"

"Why this second act is exactly like mine—it's plagiarism, that's what it is!"

"Now you listen to me, Jack Archer, you won't be able to do a single thing that way. Why not wait until the act is over, and if the play is yours then tell your story to the proper people."

"Believe you me I'll tell them. And the way I'll tell them will be nobody's business but my own. Frisby stuck himself down as the author. Are you sure you didn't [illegible] up a program on your way in?"

BETTY EXPLAINS

"Quite sure, Jack. I'm sorry, but I have none."

"Well, someone else has, I guess." Then turning quickly and addressing the gentleman behind him he asked: "Would you mind if I looked at your program a moment?" With a curt thanks to the obliging gentleman he pawed the pages, while Betty smiled in secret anticipation; then, almost too confused to speak:

"It's—it's my play, Betty—it must be my play—my name is on the program—I—I don't understand this. How did it happen?"

"I re-wrote the manuscript you tore up in one of your fits of anger. And I took it to Uncle Frisby myself."

"Gee, Betty, I'm sorry. I certainly acted the cad—"

"All right, Jack, dear, you're forgiven. But there goes the curtain on the second act, and they are calling and applauding for the author. See, there's Uncle Frisby coming toward us. I'm afraid you will have to make a speech, dear."

"But what shall I say?" he asked excitedly as Frisby motioned him to the stage.

"Oh, just say thank you and walk off." Betty smiled after him. And a new burst of applause greeted him as he made his way to the footlights and said:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I want to thank you for your kind appreciation of my tiny efforts here this evening. I want to offer my thanks to the management for their generous treatment of me, and to each and every member of the cast, individually and collectively, for their splendid rendition of my lines. And last but, by far, not the least, there is a little girl sitting here amongst you who has laughed with me, and who has sighed with me, through long weary years, and that little girl is my wife!"

Don't take calomel!

HERE'S NEW HEALTH FOR YOUR LIVER

Now banish bad breath, pimples, constipation; feel like a million!

That tired, frowsy feeling in the morning, that "dark-brown" taste in the mouth—if you would banish them and win back buoyant health, don't expect relief from salts, mineral oil, or candy and chewing-gum laxatives.

For such remedies only move the bowels. While chances are, you're one of the thousands suffering from sluggish liver which does not yield sufficient bile — causing pimples, blemishes, headaches, bad breath and a general run-down feeling.

What you need is something which acts thoroughly but harmlessly upon the liver. And in Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets you will find that "something," which stimulates the bile flow.

A successful substitute for calomel, these famous tablets are compounded of pure vegetable ingredients, and have been praised for years by millions.

To get and keep the bile flowing freely—correcting constipation, skin troubles, and win back that "fine-and-dandy" feeling of youth—go to your druggist for Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, 15c, 30c, 60c.

Preach not to me your musty Rules,
Ye Drones that mould in idle Cell.
The Heart is wiser than the Schools
The Senses always reason well.

If short my Span I less can spare
To pass a single Pleasure by;
An Hour is long if lost in Care,
They only LIVE who Life enjoy

WE WHO FEEL ABOUT to die salute you, after having lived and enjoyed countless delightful affairs this week . . . it IS a strain on the constitution, notwithstanding

Yesterday morning we donned the new Hattie Carnegie and went forth with nine engagements on our calendar, fully intending to spend a few minutes at each . . . We hobbled home around six all ready for our warm bath and canton flannel nightie . . . hope we are not disillusioning anyone

Lucretia Bori was our first stop . . . and anyone who could tear themselves away after the first number of this delightful songbird would have to be sound-proof . . . we certainly could not. It was after one when we left the Statler after a very merry reception in the lobby with many charming friends

• • •

Lucretia in Pale Grey Gown

THEN ALONG CAME THE musical leader and wanted to know if we would like to meet the Bori . . . this being only the fourth prima donna whom we have had the pleasure of chatting with this week. Did we say we accepted with alacrity? Were we charmed and delighted with her gay and colorful personality . . . ?

Her costume was gorgeous and SMART at the same time. Of pale grey chiffon . . . or maybe it was georgette . . . with full pleated skirt, high waistline, the bodice covered with tiny silver sequins, a close-fitting turban which was made almost entirely of the spangles on her raven black tresses, Miss Bori was the born actress, a real artist, as she told us in her vivacious manner how difficult it is to sing at 11 o'clock in the morning Don't we know it . . . we find it difficult to arise and greet the morning light at that hour

Perhaps if someone would try once sending us nine dozen pink roses . . . as they did to Miss Bori . . . we might do better

ALL the subscribers were in their seats after mid-morning coffee . . . a very clever ruse to corral them for the opening of the performance

Mrs. John Myers was very smart indeed in black with white gardenias

And we're telling you, Mrs. H. Parker Whittington was among the crimsons with large bunch of violets for contrast . . . or as she said "as a symbol of [illegible] herself . . . Now Mrs. Whittington! We have [illegible] noticed anything of the shrinking violet about [illegible] when it had to do with the Boston M[illegible] Musicales [illegible]

At the Bazaar

HOPING TO PICK up a bite of lunch at the Copley-Plaza, we dashed up to the Florence Crittenton Bazaar with the camera for some pictures of the debutantes modeling in the Jordan-Marsh Fashion Show . . . and were they sweet

Katherine Thayer, as the blushing bride, simply took everyone's breath away . . . she looked just like a story-book bride in ivory chiffon velvet with puffed sleeves, high waistline, Empire effect Her fair hands were tucked into a tiny velvet muff trimmed with orange blossoms

Accompanying her as maids of honor were Lydia Fuller and Elizabeth Loder, frocked in rust-toned crepe with dark brown velvet hats and muffs . . . a tiny flower-girl and ring-bearer completed the picture

• • •

Skiing Costume

WHAT WILL BE worn skiing this winter was worn by Mrs. F. L. Higginson Jr. and Peggy Read [illegible] warm and comfortable sweaters and bags

Ada Dewson showed us the correct dress for informal entertaining [illegible] long, trailing black with high neckline surrounded by cut steel beads . . . it was most becoming to her

Jane Bogardus was very "night clubbie" in wicked looking black with evening chapeau perched over one eye which twinkled through a tiny veil

The red hair of Alice Means took on added glory in light green satin and her white evening coat encircled with white fox was TOO snoopy!

• • •

Afternoon Gowns

CAROLINE DAY and Barbara Holdsworth displayed afternoon dresses . . . the kind you put on for lunch and wear to bridge and afternoon tea

It was nice to see Margaret Emerson and Mary Emery, two post debs . . . Margo had on the snooziest red wool with black and white checked scarf . . . and did she look like Paris? Mary's grey subdued her too much, we thought Betty Blake, Louise Sawyer, Anne deCormis, Barbara Eustis, Lansdale Watson, Serita Bartlett, Alice Ellsworth and Dorothy Forbes flitted down the aisles in the latest modes . . . and HOW. See you there tomorrow?

• • •

Contract Bridge

MRS. BAINBRIDGE FROTHINGHAM is sponsoring a contract tournament at the Copley-Plaza on Dec. 6, 13 and 20 and Jan. 3 and 10 . . . Mrs. B. H. Bristow Draper, Mrs. Louis Frothingham, Mrs. Gelston King, Mrs. Moses Williams, Mrs. George R. Fearing, Mrs. Ralph Bradley and Mrs. Ross Whistler are likewise interested.

• • •

Another engagement seems imminent . . . that makes two!

• • •

Mrs. William Gaston is having a hen dinner-party before the opening of "Walk a Little Faster." starring Beatrice Lillie, at which will be Mrs. Frederick Whitwell, Mrs. William D. M. Howard, Mrs. Malcolm B. French . . . all "Lady Peals of Laughter" in this yere town

• • •

Mary Garden is going to be the head of the music department at the World's Fair in Chicago next year, we hear

Another prima donna, Mary Lewis, former soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, has donated a vocal scholarship by William Thorner to a budding genius auditions will be held at Mr Thorner's Carnegie Hall studio on November 21, 22 and 23 . . .

Madame Maria Jeritza, glorious Viennese prima donna, now singing at the Boston Opera House, will appear in a talking picture written especially for her by Franz Lehar . . .

Books---And a Number of Interesting Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

Is there time for leisure in the modern world? Are people coming to a realization of the need of [illegible] free from [illegible] occupation and [illegible] they take advantage of all the facilities at their disposal?

These and similar questions are asked and answered—by C. De[illegible] B[illegible] in his volume on [illegible] re," published by the Century Co. Mr. Burn[illegible] [illegible] citizenship in the Un[illegible] [illegible] of Glasgow and he has been [illegible] some radio talks in E[illegible] and Scotland which have attracted no little attention

• • •

First Autos

He draws attention to the fact that in the 1880's the bicycle had hardly come in; in the 1890's the motor car was beginning to appear on the roads behind the red flag of an intended revolution

In the early 1900's the motor pictures were gradually being perfected as part of the variety of entertainment; and not until about 10 years ago did the radio enter into the homes of those with small incomes

Not the few rich but the millions with small incomes have been the chief beneficiaries of the new inventions and discoveries, making new uses of leisure available. The first effect therefore has been to prevent spare time seeming empty Those who are not rich can more easily find something to do with their spare time

We used to hear a lot about the "busy bee"; and work, though regarded in some moods as a punishment for sin or as Adam's curse in other mood was regarded as a noble duty which was worth doing for its own sake Adam, however never had a combined harvester nor even a tractor on the five-year plan, and the "busy bee" had not discovered chemical processes for providing scent and foodstuffs The situation is changed In any case it would be difficult to persuade anyone but a lunatic to sacrifice the time and energy which invention and discovery have made [illegible]

There is a very general mental adjustment to the new productive system, for the increase of leisure is welcomed, not opposed The [illegible] bee is no longer an adequate moral guide. The butterfly is not regarded as immoral by any but the heavyfooted mind, the clodhopper in the modern world Spare time if one can use it may make life more worth living than any work time can

The mind of man has become nomadic again The attitude of travelers toward life and the world is spreading in wider circles. Men are less "stuck" in their minds than they were even 30 years ago

Mr. Burns says, and truly, that the increase in the amount of leisure and in the opportunities for using it have brought into prominence the value of leisure as a means of escaping from the defects of everyday life. Nobody's work is without some sort of disagreeable elements. Indeed the mere fact that it has to be done at regular hours annoys some people And even the rest of life, outside of working hours, is not generally so [illegible]able that one can accept any entertainment that offers without feeling discontent at its inadequacy

It is good to escape from ourselves occasionally, not to speak of our friends and acquaintances and leisure is the time for escape. We seek relief even for a few moments from what we may call "real" life—or at any rate our usual life

• • •

Ways of Escape

From this point of view the movies and the radio provide ways of escape from ordinary life into a new common world of thought and imagination. But that is evidently not enough for some of us.

Certain ways of using leisure which used to be only possible for a few are now spreading to many Those who go "hiking" are not copying; they are inventing Those who play football or other games in public parks are not trying to be "superior." They are not trying to do what their neighbors cannot do; they are doing what everybody might do

Within the past half century changes have occurred in the relation of children to adults, especially in their leisure

Play is no longer regarded as waste of time Indeed, educational method has been almost transformed by the study of children's play Also there is a very general belief that the child should express its own opinions and make its own attempts at learning and enjoyment. The old conception that "to spare the rod is to spoil the child" is obsolete; and nobody now expects a child to be seen and not heard

But the use of leisure by children has not been left to the accidental effects of new inventions. There have been social movements in the past 50 years which express a deliberate policy of changing either the experience of childhood or the new world which will arise when those who are now children are men and women

Obviously, education in school is not the only means of preparing for that future world. The habits and attitudes of the new generation of 1932, acquired during leisure whether at play or dreaming will be projected into the social system of 1950

Another great change in the past 50 years in the use of leisure by children is the social movement embodied in the boy scouts and the girl guides. This movement has been consciously directed for the use of leisure by children; but it is obviously much less narrow in its general influence than certain similar movements in countries under dictatorships

A "modern" view of leisure implies that we are passing into an entirely new kind of civilization in which a "leisured class" will have no function at all to perform. Leisure then will not be peculiar to a "class" or group within the community, but will be shared in all its use, by every member of the community.

May that day soon be here.

Edited by MARGARET MATSON

STRAIGHTER SIT THE HATS over the brows! Men say that fashions change quickly, but to the women who watch them it seems a slow, thoughtful process—inevitable and [illegible] guided by a few master minds over in Paris who know that women demand constant change and therefore [illegible] give it to them. And so hats are steadily edging [illegible] forehead.

Somehow we [illegible] never be as flattering as [illegible] variety that the majority of us are still wearing them. There is a great reluctance on our parts to give [illegible] if we have chubby [illegible] faces, for the tilted hat was [illegible] if anything was. However, when we walk down Washington, Tremont or Newbury street or browse through the shops we cannot escape a thrill of pleasure over the sheer NEWNESS of the new hats—their saucy little brow-hiding brims, the way they flare up in back and on the sides, and keep so clear of the fur collars, and their ridiculous shallow crowns.

Bandeaux Hold Them on the Head

Some of these [illegible] assistance in holding them on [illegible]. The [illegible] pin is out of the [illegible] which to secure it, so [illegible] bandeaux that [illegible] the hats in place. [illegible] muslin and [illegible] trimming.

Seeing satin hats in [illegible] pleasant, too. Shiny black seems so much more flattering to the average person than [illegible]. [illegible] hats have all been black so far with [illegible] white crepe satins in the late afternoon [illegible] have little black veils.

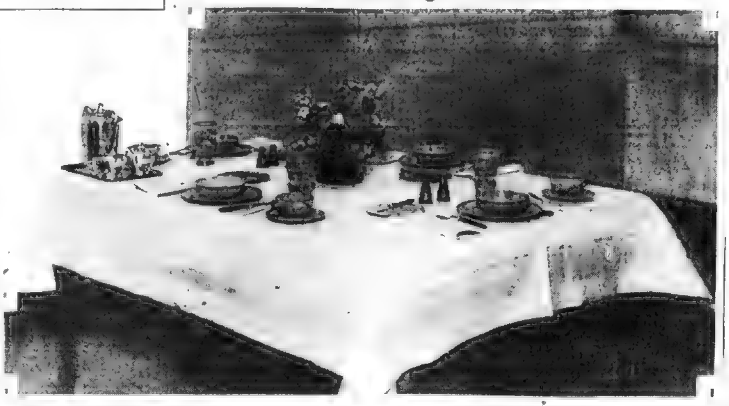
Striking Use of Color Wins Prize in Table Setting Contest



AT LAST we have found a worthy rival to the joy of breakfast in bed—a breakfast table so gay and fascinating as to dispel the deepest of early morning grouches. In a table-setting contest staged this week by the Jordan Marsh Company, the members of the Winchester Women's Fortnightly Club displayed one of the most attractive breakfast tables that we've seen in several moons.

The cloth was of basque linen in a yellow white bordered with yellow, coral and green stripes. Yellow cups were placed in green saucers, and green cereal bowls on yellow plates—all of beetle ware. The handles of the knives and forks were of coral, and all the several colors were echoed in the most ingenious way in the bouquet of flowers that graced the center of the table. Then, as though the colors themselves were not sufficiently striking, they were supplemented and intensified by the addition of a black bowl for the flowers and black salt and pepper shakers. The effect was astonishingly lovely!

The Winchester Women's Fortnightly Club owes its laurels to Mrs. Arthur W. Pitman, who was appointed by the art committee to represent them in the contest. The appointments were supplied by the Jordan Marsh Company; the flowers by Penn the Florist.

Marry Go Round

Husbands of 1932 Sport Model

By HELEN ROWLAND

ANY MAN can tell you how to get rid of a cold or how to manage a woman; but once either of them gets a good firm hold on him he seems to forget all the rules for shaking them off.

Helen Rowland

* * *

In these days the average married woman has to spend all of her time trying to keep love from flying out of the window with one hand, while she helps to keep the wolf from the door with the other.

* * *

A grouch is just a man's inarticulate way of making his disapproval felt when he hasn't the nerve to express it in words.

* * *

In most things a man may be more level-headed than a woman; but when it comes to picking out a wife he seems to suffer from temporary mental derangement and complete paralysis of the cerebrum.

* * *

The only time when a married man feels very much married these days is when some woman who has been trying to help him forget it, suddenly demands to be taken seriously.

* * *

Marrying a man to reform him always gives a woman a noble and exalted object in life—and a magnificent chance for self-sacrifice.

* * *

Before marriage a man can usually manage to make the half-hour trip to a girl's house in less than 20 minutes; after marriage his 20-minute walk from the office somehow takes him at least an hour.

* * *

The sort of people who blame all their heartaches and troubles on matrimony would probably blame the smashup on the telephone company for putting the pole in the way.

* * *

At 21 every man is absolutely confident that there are three things which will never happen to HIM—rheumatism, a bald head and matrimony!

* * *

Nothing makes a man so provoked with a woman as to discover that even his most artistic lying can't convince her of his "sincerity."

'Soft Drinks' an Accepted Food

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

IT IS AMAZING to learn how tremendous is the industry engaged in the manufacture of carbonated beverages and fruit juices. Since more than eleven billion bottles of non-alcoholic beverages were consumed in this country last year you can see that the industry is a very important one. Until recently these beverages were looked upon merely as "soft drinks." Today they are accepted by food authorities as a nutritious and valuable part of the diet.

Dr. Copeland

There are many varieties of such beverages varying as to color, taste and flavor. In former years non-injurious artificial coloring materials, as well as sugar, citric, tartaric and other fruit acids, were added for flavor. The law now demands that all the ingredients of the bottle be printed on its label.

These drinks have been accepted as a food for most manufacturers now add fruit extracts and natural fruit juices for flavoring purposes. This eliminates the unbeneficial use of synthetic flavors.

The value and importance of fruits and fruit juices cannot be over-emphasized. They are valuable because they contain important vitamins and mineral substances so essential for proper growth and development.

I receive many inquiries as to the safety of the popular soft drinks. I am glad to say that most of them are harmless to health, and in most instances actually beneficial. They are manufactured under the rigid inspection of federal and state authorities.

Health Queries

Mrs. M. B. E. Q.—What is the cause of rash appearing on the skin which looks like an insect's sting, with a whitish center, and which produces great itching, and what do you advise for this condition?

A.—This is urticaria or hives. To relieve the itching bathe the affected parts with a solution of hyposulphite of soda. Send a self-addressed stamped envelope for full particulars and restate your question.

A Reader. Q.—What is the cause of puffs under the eyes?

A.—This condition is usually due to constipation, late hours or kidney trouble. For further particulars restate your question and send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Household Hints

FLOOR COVERINGS such as hooked rugs, bath mats, and the like belong in the class of household articles which should be laundered with great frequency. Dirt is ground into them by force and if they are to retain their fresh colorings they must be put into the suds often. Of course frequent washings are the rule for most household furnishings, for good soapsuds will not harm anything that is safe in water alone.

CLOTH MATERIALS used for upholstering furniture can be cleaned in the following manner: First, remove all loose dirt by beating thoroughly with a stout cane, then rub with a pad of cloth wrung out in petrol, paying particular attention to stained parts. Afterwards rub with a stiff brush.

Correct Way for Eating Lettuce

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me the correct way to eat lettuce leaves? Should the [illegible] be cut with a knife? [illegible]

Correct [illegible] convenient [illegible] lettuce or [illegible] with a [illegible] knife [illegible] salad fork [illegible] hearts of [illegible] stiff [illegible] large leaves of [illegible] a fork which it would be so [illegible] and so correct to use a knife too. The medium size fork and knife is correct for this [illegible] if we haven't the special salad fork and knife. But most of the silversmiths now have added the salad knife to accompany the salad fork, and we find it in most patterns [illegible]. And thank Heaven for that!

Placing the Spoons

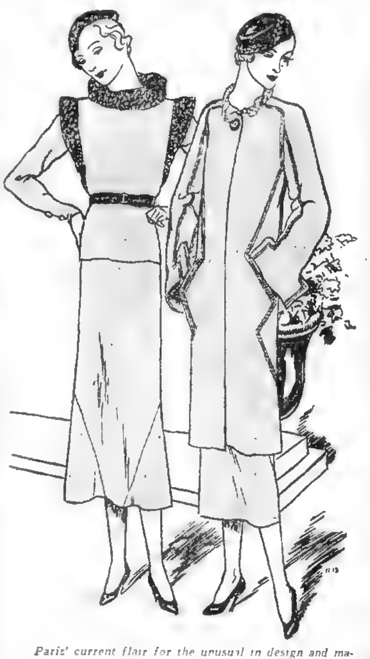
DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly tell me just how to place spoons at table? I always place them to the right of the knives and the forks to the left of the plate. And I place them in the order in which they are to be used. If I use the cocktail fork I place it to the right of the spoons. A friend of mine says that the spoons should be placed to the left of the forks. Which of us is correct?

READER.

You are right on every point. The knives and spoons should be placed at the right of the plate and in the order in which they are to be used, taking for granted that the guests start with the silver-piece furthest from the plate and proceed toward the plate. And you are right that the oyster fork should be placed on the right of the knives and spoons. For instance, if our menu calls for a shrimp cocktail, soup, an entree, the roast course and salad [illegible] dessert [illegible] brought in with the dessert, the silver-pieces should be placed like this: First, on the right, the oyster fork for the shrimp cocktail. Next on the right [illegible] the plate the soup spoon. Next on the right, nearer the [illegible] the dinner knife. And nearest the plate, if we use a knife with our salad (I do), the salad knife. On the left of the plate would be first the entree fork, which is the luncheon size fork, the medium fork. Next, nearer the plate, the dinner fork, for the roast course. And nearest the plate, the salad fork. On the bread and butter plate, the butter spreader.

Sketched in Paris



Paris' current flair for the unusual in design and material produces these two costumes. At the left is pictured Lucien Lelong's dress, a rich dark brown, with fur trimming and a detachable fur collar. The other costume is a coat by Chantal, in brown wool. Its sleeves follow the raglan and it has big pockets. A string of beads replaces the customary collar.

BY CABLE FROM THE PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, Nov. 17—Paris continues to like the game of turnabout as far as fashions are concerned. There is a favoritism for the costume that looks like what it is not or that uses an unexpected material. The evening dress which looks like a tailored suit, yet is made of frail lace, is a perfect example of the present French liking for disguising the use and the line of a costume.

The two costumes in today's sketches illustrate this fashion [illegible]—the dress which has fur trimming and a detachable fur collar, and the coat which has, instead of a collar or fur trimming, a string of beads at its neckline.

The dress is from Lucien Lelong. It is in the rich dark brown which is so popular at the moment and is trimmed with astrakan in the same tone. The costume is two-piece—a skirt which is straight to the knees, then flares out, and a jumper blouse which buttons at the back and has fur bands over the shoulders and extending to the waist. The fur collar, when detached, leaves a high neckline, untrimmed.

The Chantal coat, also in brown wool, is in the new seven-eighths length. It has sleeves which follow the raglan and immense pockets. Sleeves, shoulder lines and pockets are marked by visible stitching in self-color. A torsade of white beads replaces the customary collar.

Jelly That Sets in a Jiffy

It Retains All the Fruit Flavor

By MARTHA LEE

YEARS AGO when we set out to make some good old coffee jelly we had to allow six or eight hours for it to "set"—which took it right out of the class of emergency desserts. Then came the discovery that only a cupful of boiling water need be used to dissolve the gelatine, the balance being cold water or cold fruit juice to hurry up the setting process. But still much of the delicious flavor of the fruit gelatine was carried off in the steam that arose when that first cup of boiling water was mixed with the fruit gelatine powder.

So it is mighty good news to hear that [illegible] a brand new gelatine dessert powder that will dissolve quickly and completely in water only slightly hotter than lukewarm. Powdered fine as new fallen snow, this new fruit gelatine holds in each tiny crystal an incredible store of pure fruit flavor. No undissolved crystals—no rubbery layers—since there's no boiling heat to toughen the texture. You will be amazed at the unusual delicacy and quivering tenderness of this wonderful new dessert.

You can put it in the refrigerator without an instant's waiting and it starts to set immediately.

Have you an odd orange or banana in the refrigerator? Left-over fruit juices? Cooked vegetables? Meats? Cheese? You can turn even the most trivial food items into fascinating food dishes with these powdered gelatines.

For instance,

Grapefruit Delight

1 pkg. lime gelatine powder
1 pt. warm water
1 cup grapefruit sections, free from membrane and diced.

Dissolve gelatine powder in warm water. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in grapefruit. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serves 6. Raspberry flavored gelatine powder may be used if desired.

Apple Lime Fluff

1 pkg. lime flavored gelatine
1 pt. warm water
1 cup thick apple sauce, strained

Dissolve gelatine powder in warm water. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in apple sauce. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Serve with custard sauce if desired. Serves 10.

Banana Fluff

1 pkg. raspberry gelatin powder
1 pt. warm water
3 bananas, crushed
1 cup canned crushed pineapple
9 marshmallows, finely cut
¼ tsp. salt

Dissolve the gelatine powder in warm water; add salt. Chill until cold and syrupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Fold in bananas, pineapple, and marshmallows. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and serve with whipped cream or fruit sauce, if desired. Serves 10.

Advice of Miss Fairfax

Best to Tell Girl All About It

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

While others were having a hard time to make a living I managed very well. They say "easy come, easy go," and as fast as I made it, so I spent, with the exception of a little I managed to bank. Three months ago my girl and I made up after a misunderstanding. Shortly after our reconciliation I lost my job. She knows about that. My living expenses, though, have been so heavy that today I am down to my last few dollars. This my girl does not know.

We have been talking about marrying, but I can't support her at present. If I tell her the circumstances, it will spoil everything, and if I don't tell her I fear I shall lose her. Should I or should I not tell her these things?

WORRIED.

Dear Worried — Be frank with her, by all means, and if she is the type of girl who would make you a desirable wife, she will help you keep your courage and will not make demands. These days, when money is so scarce, it is the greatest mistake in the world for young men not to be absolutely truthful about money matters with girls they hope some day to marry. Unless girls belong to the gold-digger sisterhood they will not expect expensive entertainment, and if they are gold-diggers, you're better off without them.

Grooming

SINCE SOUND, white teeth are necessary for a fair appearance, it would be well to see that the semi-yearly date at the dentist's office is kept on schedule. The gentleman of the buzz-saw will catch cavities when they are small and, in the long run, the upkeep of the little pearls won't be anything to worry about. About three daily brushings no woman need be told.

CUTS COSTS of COLDS

Reports from thousands of families prove that the number, duration and costs of colds can be reduced by half with the new Vicks Cold-Control Plan. Prove it for yourself, as directed in each Vicks package.

HARVARD GRIDMEN BREAK CAMP TODAY

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

FANNING

—With GEORGE UNDERWOOD—

Hey There, Mr. Crowley! Your Gendarmes Ready? May Need 'Em Tonight. ↕ Next Sunday's Big Tilt. Peres Play the Fittons. Whoops! Lead Us to It!

Help! Police! Cubs and Arrows at It Ag'in!

HEY THERE MISTER CROWLEY! Yoo Hoo-o-o Mister Crowley! Superintendent Crowley of the Boston police department. Wait a minut, pluheese! We want to talk with you, Soopintendent Crowley. Better station a couple of platoons of your gendarmes with tear gas bombs and machine guns down in the Boston Garden tonight. The Bruin Cubs and the Philadelphia Arrows are going to pry off the Can Am hockey lid down there in Joe Gilman's palace de sport. When the same two teams pried off the lid down in Philadelphia last week the City of Brotherly Love saw the greatest little ice free-for-all that has been staged since that famous game up in Montreal between the old Shamrocks and Wanderers. Ask Art Ross, he knows. The Cubs and the Arrows wielded their shilelahs with the wild abandon of old man Reilly freeing Ireland. More conks were cracked and good red claret spilled than at a Donnybrook attending an old fashioned Pathron Day in County Wicklow. So many players were sent to the penalty box, the hoosegow and the hospital that it was a wonder they had enough scrappers left to finish the war. If the Bruins and Arrows continue their feud in the Garden tonight, Superintendent Crowley, you'll have to call out the riot squads and rush the ambulances. Now don't say we didn't warn you, Superintendent Crowley—don't say we didn't warn you!

YOU SEE SUPERINTENDENT Crowley, there are a flock of erstwhile Boston Cubs in that Philadelphia Arrow lineup. Your old pals Eddie Burke, Jack Pratt, Paul Runge and Joe McGoldrick all were banished to Philadelphia. Eddie and Jack and Paul and all the old gang were sore as a boil at being given the gate. They proceeded to take it out of the present aggregation of Cubs who had stolen their jobs and their gals. "Cherchez la femme" Superintendent Crowley. "Cherchez la femme" being a great detective you know there is always a [illegible] behind every war. My how Burke and Pratt and Runge did hate to [illegible] their Boston sweeties. Unless the banished Cubs serving time down in Philadelphia dig up some good looking sweeties down on the banks of the Schuylkill it looks as if the boys in the Cub-Arrow war would not be out of the trenches until long after Christmas.

THERE ARE SO MANY new faces on the Cubs, Mister Crowley you can scarcely recognize em. Manager Eddie Powers is gone to New Haven and George "Buck" Boucher is in the driver's seat. Among the newcomers are Peggy O'Neil, a 17-year-old youngster from Saskatoon who they say is faster than greased lightning; "Pinkie" Davis, an 18-year-old lad from Saskatchewan, who is hailed as another rare prospect, Frank Ingram, former Chicago Blackhawk and Arrow, Connie King and Sheldon Buckles, late of the Arrows; Alex Wood of Pittsburgh, Cleveland and way points and Ted Saunders of Springfield. Hope the new bunch can provide as much pure and unadulterated action as the old outfit did under Eddie Powers, Mister Crowley. If there is half as much action in tonight's shindy between the Cubs and the Arrows as there was in their inaugural clash in the City of Brotherly Love we fans are going to see a cockle of the heart warming scrap and your gendarmes, Mister Crowley, may have to get their night sticks out of hock and do a little conk cracking themselves. So long, Mister Crowley. We'll see you in the first line trenches tonight.

DID YOU KNOW that along Washington Street and in the corridors of the hotels they are fanning almost as much about next Sunday's big pigskin duel between the Pere Marquettes and the Fittons, as they are on Saturday's battle between the Blue and the Crimson. Take the gang up in the Back Bay News Company, for instance. 'Tis a famous rendezvous for the sporting clans. We have found it the best sports barometer we know of. If you want to get a line on what is interesting the sports public and what "gate" an attraction is going to draw, why drop in and say hullo to Jimmie Troy or Jerry Curley, field marshals of the Back Bay Fusileers, and get an earfull of the sports chatter going on around you. Last night the powwow was not so much on Yale and Harvard as it was on what is going to happen when Brown meets Colgate, the Army tackles Notre Dame and the Pere Marquettes throw out their battle front against the Fittons.

TOSS EITHER the Pere Marquettes or the Fittons against Harvard or Yale and the pros would mop up the gridiron with the collegians. Twice this season the Marquettes beat the Providence Steam Rollers. Early in the season, you remember, the Steam Rollers beat the big league Braves. That's how good the "Peres" are Archibald. The two famous professional football teams that will play for the New England professional championship in aid of the Xmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American, at Braves Field next Sunday, are made up of the pick of the New England colleges, with Illinois, Montana, Syracuse, Fordham, Georgetown, N. Y. U., Villanova and other institutions of learning also represented. When the battlefronts are thrown out at Braves Field on Sunday, fans and fannies, you will see football that IS football.

SINCE THE BROWN-COLUMBIA game the football coaches are talking more about Lou Little's new Spinner And A Half than they are about Tuss McLaughry's Triple Wingback. It was the "breaks," not Brown, that beat Columbia. Nevertheless when Brown and Colgate meet at Providence on Thanksgiving morn they'll uncork some of the best football of the year. And Kerr and his Red Raiders of the Chenango have just as smart and tricky—mayhap even smarter and trickier—an offense as has Brown. And that Colgate defense is a stone wall. No hostile foot this year has crossed Colgate's sacred white goal lines.

PERE-FITTON CLASH TEST OF SPEED

Both Pere Marquette and Fitton A. C. will be in fine shape in their [illegible] clash at Braves Field next Sunday for the independent [illegible] championship of New England and for the benefit of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American.

Peres lost Capt. Mander [illegible] end with a fractured leg in a game in Rhode Island last Sunday. Otherwise neither team has a hospital list.

The championship game at the Wigwam will be a [illegible] of [illegible] versus speed.

GIANT LINE

Big Jack Donahue, with his [illegible] pounds and an appetite to match is the Colossus. Next in line is his side-kick, good old "War" Mc McGuirk to you, with a trifling 225. Ed Clark former Crusader guard rises some six feet four and tips the beam at 215.

Paul Mackesy doesn't achieve such a height but the enemy [illegible] that even 205 pounds is not to be sneezed at. That is if their [illegible] bosers is still sneezing after the Brown bearcat gets through with it.

Harry Downes, who does some very neat centering, is quite [illegible] nal as a 205-pound neckpiece. Bernie Kurov has stolen quite a bit of his brother Kewpie's tonnage to mount to a round 21[illegible].

LARGEST BACK

[illegible] Plause is undoubtedly the largest running halfback in captivity. When that ponderous 235 pounds commences rambling under a full head of steam inhabitants of neighboring boroughs take to the storm cellars.

The genial Al Weston of Newton Needham and Southie has caressed many an alien chin with a piston-like knee backed up by some 210 pounds. Of course purely as a matter of fun and entirely legitimate. It's only that Mr. Weston runs that way.

Major Cavanaugh is noted for his leaning towards light and gentle [illegible] for his football teams. Undoubtedly the reason why he [illegible] Mr. Peck, alias Pieculewicz to be [illegible] on his Fordham team. Mr. Peck disports his 210 pounds for Pere Marquette with exceeding glee, particularly when the going is rough.

Mr. Franks, 210, and Mr. Jim Wallis, likewise, are noted exponents of touch football. I dare you to touch me. Jim also plays touch wrestling or at least that's what Paul Bowser says.

O'CONNELL SPEAKS

Such brawn and beef, according to Jack O'Connell, Fitton manager, can have but one ending. The slaughter house out at Brighton next Sunday. What a chorus of dissent from M[illegible].

Mr. O'Connell points out that his own line has some very considerable heft. And wishes special attention given to the manner in which his welterweight backs operated in the previous game. Just a flock of angry hornets stinging those large, unprotected spaces. And that while those Fitton backs can't climb such mountainous masses they can do a swell job of tunneling.

He then quoted excerpts from the Bible to the effect that David [illegible] his Goliath. And from the Boston American about that last game which Peres won, [illegible]. And announced that this time Fittons would win luck or no luck.

From present indications South Boston and East Boston will be deserted villages next Sunday. Not to mention way stations like Dorchester, Roxbury, Chelsea, Winthrop and points north, south, east and west.

CURLEY CONGRATULATES

They are all rallying round for the basket fund. Joe Conway, genial president of the Horace Partridge Sporting Goods Co., Franklin St., sent over a nice new official football for the game Sunday with his personal compliments.

James W. Brine Co. athletic outfitters at Summer and Devonshire sts., also donated another official football with the best wishes of the company.

They must have seen the crowd hold onto that pigskin at Braves Field last Sunday.

His Honor, Mayor James M. Curley has signified his intention of celebrating his birthday by attendance at the game next Sunday. And incidentally took occasion to congratulate the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund and the Fittons and Pere Marquettes on this game for the New England independent football championship.

See you at Braves Field next Sunday.

Schoolboy Dies From Grid Injuries

Cape May, N. J., Nov. 17 (AP)—Rober Luker, 12, died last night of a fractured skull received while playing football last Monday.

The boy was injured as he butted his head against another lad in a line play. He did not feel any immediate ill-effects, members of his family said, but on the following day complained of illness and last night a physician advised his removal to a Philadelphia hospital. The boy died in an ambulance while on the way to the institution.

TUFTS SLIGHT FAVORITE TO BEAT STATE

Tufts today is a slight favorite over Mass. State for the meeting of these old rivals Saturday at the [illegible].

[illegible] State [illegible] had the edge [illegible] that Tufts [illegible] the Jumbos' chances seem [illegible] today.

Tufts [illegible] was [illegible] Not [illegible] for Lew Manly [illegible] his Jumbos in excellent condition and is not going to [illegible] chances.

Although [illegible] is optimistic [illegible] State game [illegible] the confidence exists [illegible] Tufts bottled up Lou Bush as [illegible]. The Jumbos may not be able to halt the State [illegible] on Saturday.

Mayor Writes a Note to You, You and You

Quick to appreciate the importance of the Boston Evening American's Christmas Basket Fund Show which will bring together the Pere Marquettes and the Fittons in a charity [illegible] at Braves Field next Sunday, Mayor James M. Curley took time out to express his approval today.

The following congratulatory note was received from the Mayor. Though it is addressed to the Boston Evening American it is a personal letter to you as well.

"Mr. Ray Helgeson,
"Sports Editor,
"Boston American,
"Dear Ray:

"I beg you will accept of my congratulations upon the arrangements that have been made for a football game between the Pere Marquette Council, K. of C., and the Fitton A. C., of East Boston.

"These two teams constitute the two outstanding groups of athletes, whose prowess command great attention in the sporting world.

"The game between these two teams at Braves Field is arranged for Sunday, November 20, at 2 p. m. and should in itself attract a capacity attendance. The fact that it is being conducted in conjunction with the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund and that the proceeds are to be devoted for the purchase of a Christmas basket for the needy should serve as an added incentive for a record attendance.

"It is an exceeding pleasure to congratulate the lovers of outdoor sports upon the opportunity which this game presents and likewise to congratulate the Boston American upon its wisdom and charity, in making provision for aiding the needy who will be exceedingly numerous this Christmas and who if it were not for the agency of the Boston American might be without the Christmas cheer so essential to a proper observance of Christmas Day.

MAYOR JAMES M. CURLEY

"Sincerely,

James M. Curley

"Mayor."

Tenn. and G. Tech Sign 2-Year Contract

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 17 (INS)—Tennessee's [illegible] council has approved a two-year football contract with Georgia Tech, Prof. N. W. Dougherty, faculty chairman of the council announced today.

The first game will be played in Atlanta next year, Dougherty said, on a date not yet set. The Tech athletic council also must approve the contract before it becomes effective.

DENIHAN PEP TALK ONLY CEREMONY

With the exception of Warren [illegible], Charlie N[illegible] and John Lockwood every man on the Harvard squad is in perfect physical condition. And the three cripples will accompany the squad to New Haven tomorrow morning, though it is doubtful if any of them will be [illegible] for [illegible] purpose of awarding him [illegible].

Harvard [illegible] any prediction as to the outcome of Saturday's classic in the Bowl. Yet reading between the lines, there seems to be indications that Harvard has a strong feeling that it has an even chance to beat the Bulldog and that the verdict regardless of who it favors will be [illegible] margin of only one touchdown.

Since the first practice Harvard has been aiming to have Jack Crickard at top form for Yale. Crickard is the ace of the backfield and to a great extent the [illegible] offense has been built around this star who is one of [illegible] ever turned out at Cambridge.

Since entering varsity competition Crickard has been a marked man. For three years he has been absorbing plenty of punishment for he has been the pet hate of all opposing players. After almost every game he has been a mass [illegible].

STEVENS TELLS ELIS BEWARE

New Haven, Nov. 17. With a final workout scheduled for the entire varsity squad today, Yale was ready to [illegible] season. Only a half hour's limbering exercises tomorrow will be given the squad.

While Yale remained a slight favorite in the odds to win the annual classic with Harvard, Coach Mal Stevens did much to minimize the chances of Yale's going into the Harvard tilt overconfident.

Coach Stevens, admittedly optimistic over Saturday's outcome, spent some time on a pre-game speech in which he pointed out to his Yale players that Harvard would be ready for all the strategy they may offer.

Yale has been scouted in all its games this season by Harvard scouts, Stevens pointed out, and while Eli intelligence corps have camped on Harvard's battleground as well, Stevens feels that his rival coach in Cambridge will have much to show which has been hitherto unrevealed.

Stevens [illegible] decide upon his starting line-up [illegible] after the final practice today, but Yale's starting eleven is expected to be the same as that which started against Princeton, with the exception of Heims, who is generally regarded as Stevens' first choice over Parker.

The Revere youngster has boxing [illegible] and real hitting ability. He looks as if he will go a long way up the [illegible] trail.

BISSONETTE IS READY TO GO

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers' worries over [illegible] first base problem, which were reaching such a alarming state [illegible] they were reported as attempting [illegible] buy Jim Bottomley or Pat Crawford from St. Louis, have been [illegible] considerably by the reappearance of a sound and agile Del Bissonette.

Del, weighing 190 pounds and full of pep, dropped into the Dodger offices and proved by various feats that he had fully recovered from the operation for a leg infection that kept him in the hospital during most of the 1932 baseball season.

He is ready to play first base for the Dodgers next season, Bissonette said. "And," he added, "when I quit baseball about eight or ten years from now, I think I'll be a doctor."

McKENNEY AT B. U. RALLY

A Boston University eleven which to date has won two, lost two and tied two winds up the most successful season it has had in many [illegible] Saturday afternoon against Boston College at Alumni Field.

Although the Terriers are not expected to win, the students are showing more interest in the eleven than they have since football started at the intown school and they are staging a monster rally tomorrow at noon for the team.

For guests the committee have secured Dr. Eddie O'Brien, Joe McKenney and Gordon Mickey Cochrane. These three sports authorities, together with the coaches, will do the speaking. The rally will take place in the School of Education hall.

Boston University's coaches are naturally anxious to make a good showing against the Eagles. This is Mr. Lane's first year as a head coach and although his season is a success regardless of Saturday's outcome he would like to have his charges do well.

Joe McManmon, Lane's assistant, coached the Boston College line for three years and would take great delight in seeing his former charges given a stiff afternoon.

According to the Terrier mentors the trouble Saturday will lie in lack of reserve power. Coach Lane feels that his first eleven will be able to give the Eagles plenty of trouble, but he's not so confident of the ability of his subs to hold their own.

Durham—Duke [illegible] to beat in its game with North Carolina Saturday [illegible] the state foot[illegible] championship [illegible] The Blue Devils never have [illegible] from North Carolina [illegible] season.

Lafayette—The Purdue football players aren't the only ones who are working hard in preparation for the Indiana game Saturday. A shovel squad started in yesterday to remove seven inches of snow from the tarpaulin that covers the field.

South Bend—The Army and Navy games are just about enough to make the difference between financial success and failure in Notre Dame's gridiron season. The "Irish" are expecting a crowd of 80,000 for Saturday's game with Navy at Cleveland and as many more at the Army game in New York.

Pittsburgh—It might be said that uneasy lies the head that wears a Pitt football helmet. In a shake-up that started after the Nebraska game, five regulars have been demoted. Mike Sebastian and Ted Dailey were added yesterday to the list of those who probably will see the Carnegie game from the bench.

New Haven—The fact that Yale's squad is finally free from injuries has created two doubtful spots in the Elis' starting lineup against Harvard. Coach Mal Stevens hasn't decided whether to start Crowley or Callan at right half and Johnson or Howland at center.

Providence—Brown's varsity has decided there is a lot of work ahead in preparing its defense for the Colgate game Thanksgiving Day. In the first scrimmage yesterday the scrubs, using Colgate lateral pass plays, scored twice on the regulars.

Annapolis, Md.—Since Navy, under Rip Miller's coaching, uses the Notre Dame system and Notre Dame, of course, follows it, the Midshipmen have been able to save a lot of time in their preparations for Saturday's battle with the Irish.

MEEHAN SQUAD HAS NO FEAR OF PURPLE

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS

New York, Nov. 17 (INS)—A football coach who says he doesn't care much whether he wins or loses is as rare as an orchid in Greenland and twice as hard to find, but Chick Meehan, Manhattan College coach, says that he won't worry very much if his team loses to Holy Cross on Saturday and it is hard to believe that Chick is kidding the public.

"Suppose Holy Cross beats us as they figure to," Chick says smiling, "what of it? Mind you I'm not conceding the game, but if we do lose I won't do any weeping about it."

"There was a time when the thought of one of my teams losing a game made me lose plenty of sleep—but I'm older now and beginning to realize that football is too big a game, and too big an influence on youngsters to worry about the mere losing or winning."

BOYS HAVING FUN

More than a hundred green-clad Manhattan College players were running through their paces as Chick, former Syracuse and New York University coach, talked. They didn't look as big as players one sees wearing the uniforms of Yale, Army or Holy Cross, but they did seem to be having a lot of fun.

"We've taken the tension out of football," Chick said. "We have actually given the game back to the boys here in Manhattan. I teach them the game as best I can and they play as well as they can.

"If they win—swell. If they lose—well, it was fun while it lasted. That's the spirit in which we are preparing for Holy Cross. They figure to beat us badly.

WORRY BARRED FROM CAMP

"I don't think they will, but if they do none of us will worry. We've all had a lot of fun here this season."

Manhattan College won't be in the list of leading teams this year, but as one watches Meehan's youngsters going through their paces laughing, happy, making a game of it, one wonders if they won't get more out of the season than will players who star on undefeated teams. They have discovered that football is fun, a discovery which few players ever make.

BRUINS FACE REAL GAME GUY TONIGHT

By BILL CORUM

New York, Nov. 17—The New York Americans, pioneers of the sport of professional ice hockey in our town, open their eighth home season in the Madison Square Garden tonight against the powerful Boston Bruins.

It must have been in 1925 that the Americans came out of the north to introduce pro hockey and open the new garden simultaneously before such an ermine, sable and top hat crowd as you never saw.

Lawsy me, but there was money in our town those days and nights, folks. You could sit in the promenade boxes at the Garden and hear the [illegible] millionaires whistling "Heigh-ho, the Merry-O" through their teeth as they matched pennies for thousand dollar bills. They knew whatever they lost that night they would get back within an hour after the market opened in the morning. But there came a day.

After the hockey game, which [illegible] Canadiens, the majority of the crowd wandered over to a welcome-hockey party where champagne was flowing like rivers to the sea.

And as for the caviar and pate de foie gras (however that is spelled) and anchovies and the like [illegible] well, to get an honest plate of ham and eggs you had to choke a waiter.

NEVER QUITE THE SAME

The players of the American team attended in a body, of course, and it is my impression that they were never quite the same.

That night was the high-water, or possibly I should say the high-wine mark for the Americans. The rest of the story of the Americans is sad and bleak. Only one of the original squad is still with the team. He is "Bullet Joe" Simpson, the new manager. [illegible] a right good [illegible] with that.

In those days there was a little "peak" down a subway entrance in the furious forties. I believe this was "Bullet Joe's" favorite rendezvous with the cup that cheers.

Ripley doesn't have to believe this and neither do you, but I know at least one night that winter when he couldn't walk to the Garden and yet when he got there he could skate and did skate. I wish I could make it good and say he was the hero who won the game. But those happen mostly in the movies. The truth is he was no bowling success on the ice, but he skated well enough to get away with it.

LONG AGO

All that was long ago. Just as the real story of "Bullet Joe" Simpson happened long ago. Perhaps the two are in some way related. Perhaps by 1925 Simpson hadn't been able to forget what happened to him in the war. Or to conquer it?

He had reason not to, for in the attack on Vimy Ridge in '15, he was left for dead for 36 hours in a shell-hole and might be there yet if he hadn't asked a passing comrade for a drink of water.

They were going to let him go after that first year because of his playboy tendencies. He had to beg for one more chance and offer to play for nothing to keep from slipping out of the picture. From that day forward he has kept his word to walk the white line.

Last year he led New Haven into the Can-Am. playoffs. This year? Who knows? I only know he's a game guy and that I'm rooting for him to get a break.

Phair Views

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

"Past performances," says a gridiron expert, "do not count in the Yale-Harvard game," nor, it might be addded, in any other game. That is why experts are prematurely gray.

Tradition is a handy institution. The annual clinch between Yale and Harvard is always a widely discussed football function, no matter how often they have taken it on the chin from teams of inferior social status. The big three is still the big three even when it loooks like the Three-Eye League.

Speaking of the big three, Army, Navy and Notre Dame make a [illegible] able bodied triumvirate, although Navy has sprung a leak.

Back of the Cubs-Arrow rivalry is the [illegible] of the wholesale transfer of Cubs players to Philadelphia after last season's finish. Jack Pratt, Red Conn, Eddie Burke, Yank Boyd and Paul Runge were sent to the Quaker City by the Cubs in exchange for [illegible] Buckles, Connie King and Frank Ingram.

The additions to the Cubs team [illegible] done much to strengthen a team which was in the midst of the Canadian American League fight a year ago. The fans undoubtedly will make Peggy O'Neil, rookie center, a favorite from the first game. O'Neil is rugged, a good skater and handles himself like a good hockey player. He is only 17 years old and is supposed to be already stamped as a major league prospect.

The Cubs show the same starting defense [illegible] a year ago with Vin Foster and Joe Jerwa playing outside Percy Jackson. Manager Bouchér and the newcomer to the defense, Bob [illegible], will spare for them.

The lines will be considerably altered however from the forward groups which bore the brunt of the Cubs attack a year ago. Ted Saunders, new to the Cubs fold, will play the first line with Alec Cook and Lloyd Klein. Harold Harnott, Sheldon Buckles and Connie King will play the second line and the third line will be made up of Dick Benson, Donnie Weir and Frank Ingram.

With the support he receives it is just as hard for Bush to break away from opposition of his own class as it would be were he playing with a much stronger team against a stronger opponent. Bush can carry the ball with any player in the country. He is one of the best in his own class.

"How does he do it? Well, he is fast, shifty and clever, and his teammates perform their duties. It is a combination of speed and good interference. I don't know just how he would stack up as a member of one of the big teams. After all, that's mostly guess work."

I had him in a corner at one time and he actually started crawling through the ropes and I said, "Come back, Joe. I'm not hurting you," and I pulled him back.

In the sixth I was alarmed to find that my strength had deserted me. The knockout punch I planned [illegible] acting was so good that he ran away persistently and the decision in my favor was unanimously approved.

[illegible] the continent was marked by [illegible] knockout in the same ring on the same night when I put Tom Dugan and Jack Graham away in Davenport, Ia.

In Davenport, we stopped at Downs Hotel, and when I learned that Downs had a large farm six or eight miles from town I decided it would be an ideal spot for me [illegible] with a health [illegible]

I had a series of fights lined up, and sent Julia on to New York. While I was at the Downs Farm, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and Harry Harris, later bantam weight champion, came out and became my pupils.

Jack O'Brien, after a brilliant ring career, is doing well with his gymnasium at 1658 Broadway and I was much pleased to get a cordial letter from him after I left San Quentin.

Mother Meets McCoy

I had mother join me in Chicago and when I met her at the train she was so exhausted by the trip that I lifted her in my arms and carried her to a hack. I had a suite at the Great Northern, and there I took her.

[illegible] took her back [illegible] jumped [illegible] to New York [illegible] at the Fort Dearborn Athletic Club show in the Star Theater I received the most distressing surprise of my entire career.

I was matched for a six-round bout with a 215-pound boxer and wrestler, Jack McCormick, whom I regarded as a push-over. Malachi Hogan, well known sporting man and referee whose saloon on State street was a nationally known hangout for fighters—was the third man in the ring.

McCormick, when we got our instructions, asked for clean breaks—no holding and hitting in the clinches. This suited me, as I expected him to use some of his wrestling tactics. We shook hands on that stipulation and went to our corners.

Coming out for the first round, McCormick threw his arms around me as I feinted and started pounding me in the ribs with his right. I blocked with my elbow, and when we broke I drove my left to his ear, dropping him.

McCoy Kayoed

"That was a foul, wasn't it, Mr. Hogan?" said McCormick.

"Get up, you big dog," I said, "or I'll kick your head off!"

McCormick got up and swung a right haymaker at my jaw. I stepped back confidently, ready to drive in a knockout blow, but I didn't step back quite far enough. Another inch might have saved me, but as it was his bulky fist took me on the point of the jaw, and the lights went out.

I presently was able to dress myself, with Dock Payne weeping bitterly, and when I was asked what hotel I was staying at I said the Palmer House, where I had once worked for a few weeks as a bellboy years before.

The clerk informed my companions that I wasn't registered, but they engaged a room and put me to bed. I passed out, and at 4 a. m. I woke up and saw Doc Payne and brother Homer sitting beside the bed.

I, too, wept when they gently informed me what had happened.

Tomorrow Kid McCoy tells of victories over Jim McCormick and Billy Stift and of signing to meet Bob Fitzsimmons.

Passing the Puck

—By BILL GRIMES—

Under their new manager, Buck Boucher, the Bruin Cubs will make their season debut at the Boston Garden tonight against Philadelphia, practically an all ex-Boston outfit.

The Cubs-Arrow game will mark the initial appearance of a Boston's Canadian - American League team playing under any manager other than Eddie Powers, who, during his six years of faithful and efficient service with the Tigers and Cubs, became the most popular manager-coach in the game.

Due to the fact that a majority of the Arrows were Cubs a year ago the feeling between the Boston and Philadelphia teams is bitter and in all likelihood the officials will have their work cut out for them tonight.

With the exception of Joe Lamb, all the Bruins are in New York to play the Americans tonight at Madison Square Garden. As the Amerks were unable to get better than a tie with Chicago and lost to Detroit, they should not prove tough for the Bruins, who are off to their best start in years.

Joe Lamb, who came to the Bruins in a trade for Cooney Weiland, expects to get into action within a week. Two days prior to the Bruin-Canadiens exhibition game in Quebec, he broke a bone in his left wrist. He has kept in shape by skating daily and yesterday was able to use a stick for the first time without any ill effects.

The New York Rangers are trying to sell "Dutch" Gainor, who is at present playing for the Springfield Indians. The Springfield fans have been favorably impressed by Gainor's article of hockey and the sale of the former Bruin star may noticeably affect the box office.

Utility Preferred Stocks in Supply

Explanation for the recent in[illegible] creased pressure against public [illegible] preferred stocks lies in growing apprehension over their dividend prospects. This concern has been intensified by the reduc[illegible] in the United Gas Corp. first [illegible] preferred stock from $1.75 [illegible] cents quarterly, a step which foreshadows similar revisions by other holding units either because of low earning power or in the in[illegible] of conserving cash. The Street feels most skeptical of the next payments to be voted on the senior issues of Electric Power & Light and American Power & Light.

Air Reduction Earnings Estimated

Earnings of Air Reduction for the full year are reliably estimated in the neighborhood of $2.75 a share.

Expect Another Loading Decline

Because the street seems to base its expectations of the car loading showing on the weekly figures reported by the Atchison, it looks for another decline in the statement due Saturday. This will cover the preceding week. The decline in Atchison's loadings for the period was more than 7 per cent compared with the week before. Of course the aggregate for the country will take into account Elec-tion Day, which cut [illegible] five business days.

RAIL PROBLEMS ARE PUZZLING TO LEADERS

By FRANK H. MELOON

It is very evident that railroad [illegible] the cars and [illegible] Wha[illegible] Street [illegible] Chamber of Commerce [illegible] the farther [illegible]

The Rhode Island plan calling [illegible] has not [illegible]

This idea is worthy of every investigation. It certainly strikes the layman as containing possibilities, especially in territories where there is much short haul traffic now being carried by trucks.

* * *

George H. Corliss

"Conversion of a railroad right-of-way into a hard surfaced highway costs about 70 per cent less a mile than building a new road, if right of way costs are included, the Rhode Island commission estimated. A state might purchase converted roads at a price which would enable the railroad to get some return on its original investment," says a Wall Street journal writer.

* * *

George H. Corliss, well known in [illegible] on econ[illegible] [illegible] me:

Business will be BETTER in 1933. Of this there is absolutely no question. GREAT POSSIBILITIES LIE AHEAD.

One big problem that confronts industry is how to keep manufacturing costs down. This problem cannot be ignored.

Owners MUST realize that low production cost is IMPOSSIBLE with 'patched-up' equipment, antiquated machinery and managers who still pursue old methods.

"Progressive management MUST look to improved mechanical machines to produce every manufactured unit at a lower cost. Unprogressive managers will join the army of unemployed. They will not resign. They will be thrown out with their obsolete machines and out-worn methods.

"In 1933 men will go back to work but cannot be profitably employed using 1929 machinery. The United States will not stand still. For many years yet to come this country will be going some where—either backward or forward. The direction of travel will depend largely on machinery—old or new."

Chevrolet Adding to Its Employment

Detroit, Nov. 17—Chevrolet Motor Co. has increased substantially its working forces during the past few weeks. Payroll at the main plant in Flint is now approximately 8000. More than 2500 men are employed at the Saginaw foundry and 36[illegible] in the Bay City plant where carburetors and other small parts are manufactured.

BANK STATEMENT

Boston balance $13,000,000
Boston clearance $34,000,000

—STATE ST.— Hears:

Little that will cheer the prospective buyer of stocks. Bearishness is almost unanimous and the short side must be rebuilding at a rapid rate. Yet the actual behavior of the market is not typical of the prelude to a swift slide in prices. Volume refuses to expand on the downside and the number of issues traded continues to drop along with general prices. All in all it seems the wise thing to give the list a bit more leeway and not jump to the conclusion that all hope is lost.

Street Gossip

One of the straws which seem to [illegible] that higher prices are expected came to the writer's attention early today. It is the rumor of a bull pool in Union Carbide. The [illegible] broker behind the group is most conservative and rarely bucks the general trend. His [illegible] visors and banking connections are of the best.

Now the mere formation of a pool is not any assurance that prices are going higher. But it is rather obvious that pools are not formed to put stock prices higher if the outlook is so beclouded that near-term happenings are likely to saddle them with good-sized losses.

Another group is said to be accumulating Air Reduction. The story many observers read into this move concerns the dividend possibilities of U. S. Industrial Alcohol. Air Reduction as the owner of a large block of stock would naturally pick up a tidy sum in this event which would improve its own net showing.

Boardroom Briefs

One of the principal ben[illegible] centers around the character of the selling. Bears maintain that it is outright liquidation. If this point is granted without debate it then remains for the sellers to point out the buyers. The public usually absorbs such offerings and it is not in the market.

Were market opinion is so decidedly bearish it does not pay to miss examining a single bear point. Next in importance is the report on car loadings due Saturday. It will show a real drop from the previous week. But it includes election and Armistice days, which obviously exaggerate the loadings loss.

Next on the list of bear arguments is the fracturing of the uptrend line on the charts. First this line appeared to the writer as only an intermediate affair. Second it was too steep to hold for any great length of time. Its importance is, therefore, seemingly overrated.

STOCKS LOWER IN BOSTON DEALINGS

Leading shares were worked lower in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange after a forenoon display of firmness. Changes were largely of fractional proportions and trading was extremely dull. New England Telephone advanced a point in early trading but relinquished its gain later in the session.

American Telephone showed a slight loss and General Electric was down fractionally. [illegible] continued mixed with [illegible] showing slight improvement [illegible] Pennsylvania eased [illegible] too.

Eastern Steamship second preferred was a strong feature, shooting up more than 2 points. Fractional recessions were shown by such issues as Bigelow-Sanford, General Capital and United Fruit.

Torrington, United Shoe and Nash Motors held unchanged for the greater part of the session.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

With American Telephone and Electric Bond & Share doing the handsome thing on their dividends, Wall Street is breathing a little easier. There are plenty of other thorns on the road, notably the war debts. The market, however, has been on the downgrade for several days, and ought to have a little kickback at least. More than this can hardly be expected without some good news.

Bond & Share

We understand that the [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible]

Here and There

In spite of what is going to happen to the war debts is keeping [illegible] out of the market. [illegible] Union Carbide this week was due largely to the [illegible] of the latest report [illegible] on the information that the regular dividend would be paid this month.

One of the mysteries of the current market is the enormous demand for Kreuger & Toll Bids at an eighth of a point total nearly 400,000 shares . . . No, there's nothing going on apparently except that there are people willing to gamble a few dollars.

[illegible] will pay off $[illegible] of the total loans some time around the first of the year leaving $16,000,000 . . . Paying its common dividends in convertible preferred allows the company to apply its earnings to its bank loans.

Bank of England's Reserve Increases

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—Weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes in pounds: Total reserve increased 1,821,000, circulation decreased [illegible] 813,000, bullion increased 8000, other securities decreased [illegible] public deposits increased 20,000, other deposits increased 1,953,000, notes reserve increased 1,813,000, government securities [illegible]

Proportion of the bank's reserve to liability is 41.17 per cent, compared with 40.42 last week. Rate of discount 2 per cent.

Rail Employment Shows an Increase

Employes on railroad payrolls increased as of September 15, the first time such a showing was made in many months, Interstate Commerce Commission figures indicate. All employes of class 1 steam railways totaled 1,010,442, against 996,317 in August. The increase is attributed to the improvement in carloadings at that time and is in contrast with the record low level in August.

N. Y. Investors Is Displaying Profits

New York Investors, Inc., reports estimated net profit of $361,097 after taxes and other charges for quarter ended Sept. 30, 1932. For nine months ended Sept. 30, 1932, net loss after taxes and all charges is estimated at $1,746,2[illegible] and includes a write-down of assets amounting to $1,6[illegible]5,56[illegible].

Dividends

Hobart Mfg. Co. (Troy, O.) declared two quarterly dividends of 25 cents each on the common, payable December 1 and March 1 to stock of record November 19 and February 8, respectively. In previous quarter company paid a dividend of 30 cents.

PRICE CHANGES ONLY NARROW FOR LEADERS

New York, Nov. 17—Price changes for most leaders in today's dull trading on the New York Stock Exchange were only narrow, as shares shuttled back and forth, mostly with a heavy undertone.

Most buying and selling appeared to originate with the Wall Street professionals.

Shares enjoying pool sponsoring showed considerable resistance and a few issues made net gains, but the majority trended lower.

Afternoon losses of 1 to 2 points were recorded in American Tobacco B, Eastman, Johns-Manville, New York Central, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Union Pacific, Liggett & Myers B, and Lackawanna.

U. S. Steel, Anaconda, Corn Products, Consolidated Gas and National Biscuit gave up substantial fractions at the same time.

Resisting the selling ripples with fair success were American Can, American Smelting, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, General Electric, General Motors and Standard of New Jersey which mostly restricted their declines to small fractions. Pacific Gas, Procter & Gamble, Public Service of New Jersey, Vanadium, Penick & Ford, and Safeway Stores worked up.

Wall Street interest again converged largely on the unsettled question of foreign debts. The day's business news was of minor importance as a market factor.

Advices from the steel trade indicate that the pace of production is slowing down somewhat, which is in line with seasonal experience. Coper prices receded a shade further for export metal, sales being reported at 5.55 to 5.70 cents a pound today against 5.65 to 5.75 a few days ago. This recession erased about half of the recent price rally.

DIVIDENDS FAVORABLE

Dividend actions continued to attract attention. Penick & Ford, an important Corn Products manufacturer, declared an extra dividend of $1 a share in addition to the 25 cent regular quarterly payment. One year ago, the same company declared a 50 cent extra. National Lead voted a regular payment on its common.

An outstanding exception to the trend was Homestake Mining, which spurted over 7 points early in the session. Its rise brought a flurry of buying into the gold shares.

On the Curb, Electric Bond & Share, on which the regular quarterly stock dividend was declared after yesterday's close, rose about a point early, but fell back under light selling.

Niagara Hudson Power held its substantial gain of the previous session in spite of substantial realizing. Recent buying of the stock, Wall Street heard today, had been based on reports that the company plans to liquidate bank loans, estimated at about $25,000,000, through the sale of bonds of some of its subsidiaries.

Management of Loft, Inc., believes this is an opportune time to secure rental arrangements which will prove profitable for the company in future years, and accordingly plans for the coming year the greatest expansion in history of the company. The company now operates 130 stores.

Food Index Makes New Gain in Week

Bradstreet's wholesale food index, published today, continued to gain last week, rising 4 cents following the previous week's advance of 3 cents. The index for Nov. 15 was $1.71 compared with $1.67 for Nov. 8. The most importatn single factor in the advance was a sharp jump in the price of eggs, the agency reports.

Closing Is Weak in London Market

London, Nov. 17 (AP)—Prices on the stock exchange today were unsettled. Continued weakness in sterling exchange and uncertainty over the war debt situation induced selling in giltedged securities. Foreign bonds and other sections also declined. The closing was weak and prices near the lowest of the session.

Closing Is Heavy in Paris Trading

Paris, Nov. 17 (AP)—Heaviness in Wall Street and London affected opening prices on the bourse. There was a slight general betterment later. Most rentes and international issues were slightly lower. The market closed heavy.

Trading on the Berlin boerse was dull and the closing was weaker due to political uncertainty.

Waltham Seeking to Effect Loans

Waltham will receive bids until November 22 for $50,000 sewer loan bonds due 1933 to 1957 and $6000 school loan act bonds due 1933 to 1938, all dated October 1, 1932. Bidder to name rate of interest in multiples of ¼ of 1 per cent.

Meriden, Ct., will receive bids until November 23 for $150,000 general improvement bonds.

Bank Clearings for Week Larger

Aided by a substantial rise in New York city, bank clearings last week increased 19.2 per cent above the figures of the preceding week, Bradstreet's reported today. The clearances were $4,282,934,000, compared with $3,591,971,000.

New Optimism Is Found by Theaters Leader

New York, Nov. 17 (INS)—"Better times are coming. The scale has left the American public. Haven't you noticed the new spirit of optimism and hope since election day?"

M. E. Comerford, president of the Comerford Theaters—a group of about 80 theaters in New York State, Pennsylvania and Rhode Island—made these assertions in an interview today. He said he did not know, of course, how soon business would start surely on the road to recovery, but he was optimistic "now that the American people have shed the deadening feeling of depression."

Asked concerning the theater business he said that, with the cold weather setting in, it is getting a little better, and added:

"I see a slow but substantial improvement."

Most of his sentiments were echoed by Frank C. Walker, vice-president and general counsel for the Comerford Theaters. Walker said:

"I hope to see a slow but stead improvement in business. I feel that with the election over people will buckle down to business better than they have been doing. The fear of a new administration was a myth.

"The people know that President-elect Roosevelt is a sound man. His background and his entire public career establishes that fact. Why, the credit of New York State is on a firmer basis than the government itself.

"In our business—theaters—there is a slight improvement compared with this time last year.

"In my opinion the broad vision of Governor Roosevelt is going to be helpful in stabilizing the business of the country generally. He is going to start from foundation and build up. He will be for all the people rather for any class. That very fact is certain to established a spirit of confidence which has been badly needed."

Brewing Issues Offerings in Need of Careful Selection

Of direct importance to the investor today is the prospect that modification of the prohibition act will be taken as the signal for a flood of stock issues of beverage and brewing concerns. Doubtless a number of these concerns—those that are well financed and operated—have excellent chances of reaping a substantial share in the profits to be made in the rejuvenated industry. Others again will be lacking in the necessary experience and resources to keep pace with the leaders. The investor through his unfamiliarity with the facts is likely to go astray unless he chooses his investments intelligently.

Character of management and financial responsibility are going to count for most in this respect. If the investor is careful to purchase only those issues which are sponsored by men of experience and reputation, his chances of profiting from the opportunities which lie ahead will be multiplied. In this connection the recently formed Beverages Incorporated, organized by a group of Boston bankers, investment counsel specialists and former brewery executives, including Walter A. Carl and Walter Croft, may be cited as an example of a widely planned enterprise which through the flexibility of its program and the standing and ability of its management has better than average chances of success.

It can easily be seen that the management—the Franklin Management Corp.—is confident that the stock of this company will be worth considerably more than its issue price or else it would require something more than warrants for its services, no management fees having been provided. The warrants to purchase stock at $3 a share go to the managers and underwriters, but they also go to the public so that they will continue to share with the management. Control of the company will be with the public stockholders. These provisions are in direct contrast with most of the popular methods of financing used in recent years.

Rukeyser Sees U.S. as Extremely Skeptical

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

New York, Nov. 17—So many business and financial leaders early in the depression erroneously told the world that everything was basically sound that the public, thoroughly skeptical, is in an "Oh Yeah" frame of mind.

Faith which three years ago was in excess supply has become a rare quality. And it seems to me that the country has swung to an extreme in skepticism. It is the confidence and daring and hopefulness of the venturesome that provide work for the multitudes.

The press agented leaders of the bull markets—the so-called big ten—have long since dropped out of sight. Whom is the public to believe nowadays? I think that there should be greater faith in the authority of objective data.

After long silence, one of the so-called big ten, Arthur W. Cutten, famous Chicago wheat trader, at length emerges into the limelight with a defense of speculation. He is at least to be commended for his candor in characterizing himself as what he really is; namely, a speculator. All too many other speculative financiers have been disposed to call themselves investors or bankers.

In view of the chronic low farm prices prevailing, Cutten's diagnosis of the effect of curtailment of the freedom of speculators in the Chicago Board of Trade is timely. Mr. Cutten points out that through new restraints on futures trading the Government discouraged speculation by individuals, and substituted speculation with public funds through instrumentalities of the Federal Farm Board.

Mr. Cutten goes back to the incident in 1926 when he was dragged on the carpet of the Chicago Board of Trade because, it was indicated, Government officials thought he was carrying too big a bull position in wheat.

"Since that day," Cutten asserts, in the Saturday Evening Post, "the trend of wheat prices has been steadily downward. Russian wheat has been a factor in this situation, of course. So has the lessened demand resulting from a dietary change among our own people. Taken by and large, however, and including the increased acreage our farmers were induced to plant during the war, the state of the market is attributable to Government action. For years the cry against speculators was that they raised the price of a loaf of bread to the poor workman. Now, when it is believed that the fundamental evil in our economic situation is the low prices received for his products by the farmer, the Government would like nothing better than higher prices all along the line. With respect to the grain trade, the dull state of the market is due to the fact that speculators have been driven or frightened away from it."

Ct. Electric Net $1,811,547

Connecticut Electric Service Company reports for the 12 months ended October 31, 1932, net income available for dividends of $1,811,547, the balance for the common stock amounting to $3.45 per share on the average number of shares outstanding during the period, against net available for dividends of $5,270,649 in the previous 12 months. The 1931 net for the common figured at $3.75 per share.

LAMONT GIVES 'DEBT' VIEWS

New York, Nov. 17 (AP)—Two stranglers of world trade, in the opinion of Thomas W. Lamont, are tariff barriers and an "unnatural stream" of war debt payments. He called the war debts "perfectly just" but "impossible."

The financier's declaration about war debts, coming at a time when the problem has once more leaped to the fore at Washington, was greeted with much interest.

Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., discussed "some of the major causes of present-day conditions," telling the conference of universities that "the single underlying world-shaking cause" was the World War and "the unwisdom of man, who permitted that war."

After the armistice, he said, the war was transferred from the military to the economic field.

"Here America has been one of the leaders in the economic war," he declared. "In the two drastic tariff increases of 1922 and of 1930 she set standards for the strangulation of trade which other weaker nations felt compelled to emulate.

"Thus, the four years' war on the battlefields of France has been continued by 14 years' economic war on a world-wide front."

MELLOW DRAMMER

"Ha, me proud and haughty beauty,"
Hissed the villian through his teeth.
"I'm the man you're going to marry;
Not big, handsome Jack Montieth.

"Scream your lungs out, none can hear you
From this old, abandoned tower;
Long have I devised and plotted
To get you within my power.

"And big, handsome Jack, your lover,
It's the last of him you've seen,
He is lashed across the rail tracks;
Soon is due the five-fifteen.

"Listen to its whistle screeching!
Soon its wheels will reek of gore.
In two minutes at the latest
Handsome Jack will be no more.

"Soon will come the dear old parson
To make you my lawful wife.
When he's finished with the service
You will be my own for life.

'Hark' I hear a footstep sounding
The old parson it must be.
Calm yourself and heed my warning;
Tell him not what I told thee."

But, instead of the old parson
In rushed handsome Jack Montieth,
And he spoiled the villian's facial,
Causing him to swallow teeth.

Then Jack with a face determined,
Using all his manly power,
Threw the villain from the window
Of the old, abandoned tower.

Jack then cried, "Ha cha, cha, baby!"
In his arms she nestled, shy,
And he told her of his rescue
By the parson, passing by.

P. L. WATTERS.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Broadway Merry-Go-Round!

O yes, they call this the merry-go-round, and you might as well call it that, although it isn't always merry, as I've pointed out to you time and again. For instance, look at that chap sitting on a bench in Central Park—thin-faced, haggard, worried, broke. I wonder what passes through his mind as he watches the gay gals and lads canter by on their high-spirited steeds or observes certain chaps he used to know in his hey-day whiz by in their high-powered machines. The bench-sitter is Jack Jarrett, and it wasn't so long ago that he was the dancing partner of Joan Sawyer—of Vera Maxwell—of Mae Murray. Not so very long ago. Today he sits on a park bench.

And there is a flaxen-haired beauty, a singing comedienne, who has soared close to stellar heights within the past few seasons, nor is her star descending, for she is still young, beautiful and highly talented. But only a few of us know that this beauty, with everything in the world to live for, attempted to efface herself from what she considered a futile life only a few weeks ago. And for what? For unrequited love of a chap connected with the cinema out on the Coast. I call public attention to her case, without mentioning names or endeavoring to identify her, purposely, and not because I want to dramatize a paragraph. I want her to know—what most of us know—that the fellow is entirely unworthy and that her present heartbreak will save her so many countless heartbreaks in the future.

So, to take your mind off a depressing subject, peek into Lindy's and observe with what gusto that dark-haired fellow clamps his jaws into a huge sandwich and sips tea from a glass—tea and lemon from a glass—not a cup, mind you! Irving Berlin, ladies and gents, and I know just how comforting it must feel to drink tea (with lemon) from a glass without having snooty acquaintances of the lorgnette set raise their eyebrows and sniff disdainfully. And, by the way, you've probably read in this column and other columns of the rather hilarious activities of Ted Coy along the Lighted Lane. Only the other day it was reported that the one time All-American back, conceded by many to be the greatest football player in history, had engaged in a rough-and-tumble tussle with a night club owner and emerged second best. Well, just to set the records straight and restore a hero to his pedestal, Ted Coy, the Real, hasn't been in a night club, speakeasy or after-supper jernt in the past ten months—for one thing, his wife has been desperately ill, for another, Coy has stuck pretty closely to business. In other words, a Gay Imposter has been making the rounds, posing as Coy and having one heck of a time—but usually ending up with a punch to the snoot or other vulnerable points. Which is perfectly swell. I'm all for the swelling ranks of Broadway Imposters getting socked in the snoot, nor must you attribute this to the well-known Sobolonian saddist streak. I'm still having trouble trying to convince a certain haberdasher that I didn't buy $19 worth of shirts and ties from him on credit and tell him to send the bill to the office. On my word o honor, I didn't, and on his word of honor, somebody who claimed he was Louis Sobol did.

Take a good look at that nice theater over there on West 52nd st.—the Alvin—because it's housing a hit, "Music in the Air." Personally, I don't care whether "Music in the Air" is a hit or not. I haven't a nickel invested in it, but it just occurs to me that the Messrs. Jerome Kern and Arthur Hammerstein, authors and composers of the piece, have again used a backstage setting as part of their theme, and I recall their two other hits, "Showboat" and "Sweet Adeline" also had backstage settings, which brings to thought that Larry Schwab may have purposely closed his "Take a Chance" (preposterous idea, of course), so that he might revise and recast and have a success on his hand. For before he and Mandel brought "New Moon" into Manhattan, they closed it and revised it and recast it, and before they brought "Desert Song" to Broadway, they closed it, revised it and recast it, you may remember that both shows were the top-notch hits of their season. A young gentleman of Broadway, tall, awkward, near-sighted, is the talented Irving Hoffman, erstwhile columnist and still a leading caricaturist. Hoffman creates most of those fantastic Christmas cards sent out by Broadway celebrities. From now until Christmas card mailing time he'll be working on them day and night, but running true to form, he's never sent out a Yuletide greeting, himself.

Attorney extraordinary with a forgivable fondness for dogs is Carl Helm, distinguished Manhattanite. Not so long ago he was forced to take a trip to the Coast and he was somewhat puzzled whether to consign his four prize hounds to the care of a kennel while he was away or entrust them to his man, Tomo Sato, a Japanese schoolboy of considerable understanding. "Tomo," he said, "do you imagine it would be safe for me to leave and let you take care of these four dogs?"—"Ha, ha, ha, laughed Tomo, politely as he bowed low, "I am take good care of the honorable dogs. All my life was I brought up with dogs." So Carl Helm left for the Coast and a week late came this letter from Tomo: "I must very be sorry you to tell your dog King he been very sick but I and the rest of the dogs we all fine okay. Your loving brother, Tomo Sato."

There isn't any reason why I shouldn't reveal this lad's name, for I don't imagine he'd object—but I'm not going to. The reason I don't imagine he'd object is that he is—or was—one of the outstanding publicity men of the coast, exploiting a cluster of our leading cinema stars. He's in town now, trying to drink himself to death on rot-gut hooch that the cheaper hideaways serve—he wants to die that sort of death and in the meantime he's trying to squander all his money. It's because of a girl in Colorado who kept insisting on saying "No" to him—and who finally told him for God's sake to keep away from her and don't ever speak to her or write to her again. For all she cared, he could go jump into a lake. So he came here to Manhattan, and, as I've stated, is trying to go to the dogs. Now on Saturday he went out to the Latonia track and bet $50 on Helen Green in the third race and she came in paying $51.64 for $2. In the fourth he wagered $125 on Hamilton and she paid $20.48. In other words, he was very much like George Barr McCutcheon's young man Brewster who had to spend a million dollars or else. Our broken-hearted swain has tried to waste his money on gambling, but is winning steadily. So Sunday morning he went down to the Bowery, staggering drunk, and gathering about 200 derelicts, led them like a pied piper into restaurants and fed them well, after which he collected them behind him, got up on a hydrant and informed them that he would be back, perhaps, next Sunday again—that they were to remember it was all for a little girl in Colorado who had turned him down.

Jean Malin's not riding with us these days, but he's riding plenty high and mighty out on the Coast and now he's gone ahead and finally applied for those divorce papers from the local gal who wed him in his high and mighty riding days back here, a gesture, of course, because the lady, I understand, had already filed her own suit for divorce. And out in Chicago, Bee Palmer is getting her chance at last to come back to some semblance of her former glory, for Mike Fritzl, oldest cafe man in the Hub, reputed to be the best natured host, is opening a place after all these years, to be called Chez Pierre—and the only reason he's opening it, so he confides to intimates, is to give the blonde, thigh-quivering, mellow-voiced Bee her chance in the sun again. Or so the story goes, and whether you believe it or not doesn't matter, for the Broadway Merry-Go-Round has come to its halt for the week.

Knows Power Trust Tricks

Arrival of Senator-Elect Brown of New Hampshire Timely

Fred H. Brown, the newly elected successor to United States Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, was for seven years a member of the Public Service Commission of New Hampshire. He will carry to the Senate none of that skepticism as to the existence and reality of a Power Trust, which finds expression now and then among the reactionary Republican members of that body.

Speaking of his long experience on the Public Service Commission of his state, Senator-elect Brown says:

> "In that time I have learned a lot of POWER TRUST TRICKS. Maybe there was a day when the American public, soaked with exorbitant rate schedules, could afford to pay interest on holding company investments watered to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars. They cannot afford it now."

Senator-elect Brown's point of view will be helpful in the legislation which lies before the recently elected Congress, on the subject of utility regulation and holding company control. His avowed purpose to "get some facts before the folks of America" will not be cheering news to the utility companies which have long boasted that "we regulate regulation."

> "The Insulls and Kreugers have given the notion that all you need for success is a lot of nerve and a big corporation," says Mr. Brown, and he adds: "I think this country's big power combines have had a lot to do with popularizing SHADY METHODS in ORGANIZATION and STOCK MANIPULATION."

Mr. Brown's arrival in the United States Senate will be viewed by the great body of Americans as timely in the extreme. His views on the great issue of curbing parasite holding companies and REALLY regulating utility corporations, coupled with his scorn for the shady corporate practices, which have so long afflicted the people, augur a useful public career.

The wisecracks of Senator Moses were never more than a poor substitute for sincerity and conviction.

Losing by a Hair

To escape only by a hair won't help a burglar much after this, if he leaves that hair behind. Dr. Goddard, who gives a course in scientific criminal detection at Northwestern University, tells the up-to-date sleuth that a hair determines the age of its owner.

This may help a sleuth more than Sherlock Holmes' famous method of analyzing tobacco ash. A cross-section of the hair, it seems, shows a lot of rings, just like the cross-section of a tree.

The drawback is that criminals are warier than they used to be and not so leisurely. They are less generous in leaving fingerprints around. They do not smoke a special blend of Latakia, or perique, or any kind of tobacco in particular. Very few of them wear their hair as long as did the Seven Sutherland Sisters.

The greater part of a criminal's leisure seems to be spent in the barber shop. Only the other day a Chicago police official said that criminals were almost the best-groomed members of a community.

Still, that scientific hair clue looks like a step forward of Nemesis, and any burglar who isn't totally bald or doesn't wear a wig is liable to be out of luck.

Join the Red Cross

Have you joined the Red Cross yet?

Your dollar might just buy the medicine or food or other supplies that would save the life or allay the suffering of a fellow human being.

When peoples are ravaged by disaster, whether it be hurricane, or tornado, our first thought is of the American Red Cross. We expect the nurses and doctors to be on the line, ministering to the torn and afflicted.

This work of human mercy, on land or sea, in every clime, can not flow from a magic wand. It must be financed and supported by the generosity of our people.

Nor does the Red Cross confine itself to repairing the wounds of catastrophes caused by the unruly elements. Possibly you have not heard that 1,357,000 nursing visits were made to the homes of the poor this year. Or that close to 1,000,000 children were examined as to their health in the public schools.

The Red Cross is the symbol of mercy and kindliness on earth. Take part in it now, at the approach of the holiday season of peace and good cheer for all.

'Funny Things' in Boston

Arthur Train, the author, tells of some "funny things" about Boston.

Theatrical performances here were proscribed for 167 years after the city was settled.

The opera was introduced to America in 1825. But the word "opera" was so daring to the Bostonese of the day they used the phrase, "Lectures on Music."

Violin music was forbidden in Boston churches until the 19th century, although some of the great compositions were distinctly of religious purpose and inspiration.

Now we have religious services to the accompaniment of orchestras, with sermons illustrated by the cinema.

The early fellows may have been a bit queer. And maybe not. At least they went to church on Sunday mornings.

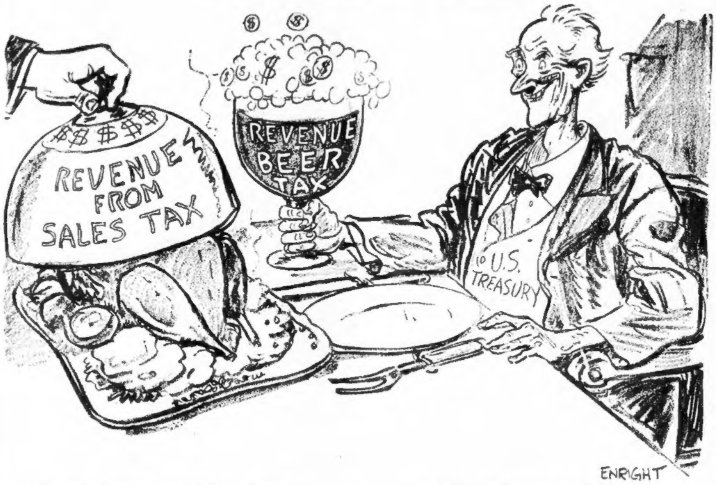
'Throwback' Science

Until just the other day, most of us thought electroplating was a modern trick—or as modern as Faraday, who showed in 1834 how it was done. But along comes Dr. Fink, of Columbia, who has proved, after studying the antimony vessels in museums, that the Egyptians knew all about that process 5000 years ago.

It looks as if a great deal of modern invention is just rediscovery of what was known a long time before. Tungsten, for example. It goes into the making of high-speed tools. But Damascus swords, which slew many Crusaders without spoiling their fine edge, had tungsten worked into the steel.

Professor Semmelweiss, a German scholar, now proves that the chorus in the Greek dramas—Sophocles, Aeschylus and so forth—really crooned. Just like our radio crooners. This is the crowning disillusion. It makes us wonder if human progress is not more apparent than real.

Feast After Famine



Beset by hunger, parched by drought,
His eyes are almost popping out
To greet the noble sight.
"Don't wake me up if I'm asleep,
But let me slumber long and deep,"
He croons in his delight.

For when the Treasury is bare,
With nothing but the empty air
To ease that inward ache,
A load of steaming revenue
Washed down by luscious amber brew
Is not so hard to take.

New York Day by Day

When Courage Wanes

NEW YORK, Nov. 17—Manhattan, once so aloof in personal contacts, now delights in the huddle. This, psychologists aver, always is true of people when courage wanes. As the individual is super-conscious of the tug for companionship in calamity, so is humanity in the bulk.

I've wondered if many drooping figures in the breadline miserere have not been seeking the cheer of conversation as much as the warmth of hot coffee. In the side street sleepy shadows these nights, the forlorn flotsam chatter. It is proverbial, such outcasts rarely talk.

On the park benches at sundown, are little flurries of animated conversation. Along a sweep of upper Riverside Drive, a recent sundown, a fellow, muffled in a frayed coat, hallooed from the stone wall: "Hey, buddy! See you a minute?" It was not the plaint of the moocher.

He had a deck of soiled cards and rather wistfully inquired if I wouldn't play a little "casino or something"—hastily adding "not for money." He explained that he was lonely. In any other time, it would seem a "come on." Idle before a shop window, and soon a stranger is chirping at your side.

Theater lobbies, subways, bus tops bristle with more talk than ever before. In cheap restaurants, patrons no longer rush away. Many have no place to go. So they sit and chat. So much so, many have signs reading: "Please make way for others immediately upon finishing."

Modern love is bewildering, but has engaging frankness. This afternoon, I was the only patron at the soda counter of a 42d st. drug store. A sheikish young soda jerker broke his monotony by lifting the receiver, giving a number and asking for Margaret. "Do something for me, will you?" he inquired. Evidently there was an affirmative for he continued: "Give me a little idea how crazy about me you are." It was satisfactory, for he clipped off an enthusiastic "O. K.," and hung up. Then, with a hand-rubbing glow and wink, ecstasied: "What a number!"

Texas Guinan has bowed out of the night club picture. Each successive return met increasing aloofness on the part of the Good Time Charlies, who used to notch a feverish new high at her "Hello, Sucker!" cheerio. Nothing has happened to Texas. She still is her effervescently joyous, blonde and pearly-smiled self, but something happened to a spinning world. And that's something not even Tex's popularity can check.

To a large number, at least, the foppish Clifton Webb has become the best-dressed actor on the American stage. If one cares for wide pleated pantaloons, swooping balloon-like from the vest line to a graduated cuffdom—and I'm a silly who does—no one tops Webb. And no one else has acquired his jaunty hank-panky with a lapel flower of corn blue. He's the last of the dandified dancing boys whose lilting postures were excited by the real maestro—Vernon Castle. In middle years, Webb still is the typical "mama boy," going no place without her.

Actors are not alone in a penchant for odd sartorial setups. Consider the producers! John Golden's deep blue collars, for instance. The late Ziegfeld's collars of lavender. The hatless Earl Carroll. George White's blue serge and midget bow tie of black. The unshaven Jed Harris. Arthur Hopkins' bowler derby. Then, of course, there was Belasco's trick collar. Oscar Hammerstein's conical silk hat and Abe Erlanger's cap abaft.

Franklin D. Roosevelt's odd smile inspired many editorials during the campaign. But most public smiles have always struck me as an effort. For instance, the only smile in the movies that ever seems real is Jimmy Durante's. The nimble-toed Marilyn Miller spoiled her art, for me, with a prop grin. The most gracious and warming smile I ever saw was Mark Twain's. That was because he never smiled unless he meant it.

I have, man and boy, been introduced to Jesse L.—or is it R.?—Lasky more than a dozen times. Frank Case presented me at least five. But so evanescent is my personality, he has just got around to remembering me. I permit him to get hip-deep in a bow, then appraise him from toe to head in a detached way, and look coldly away. It is more fun.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

They're Wised Up!

FOR A YEAR I've been traveling, studying America. Not big-money America; but the REAL America, where most of our 120,000,000 live—the America of mountain shacks and prairie dugouts; city tenements; cotton mill hovels; ranch homes and backwoods huts.

Elsie Robinson

And I'm telling you—something big has happened to this country of ours!

For 50 years now I've been going over much of this same trail; talking to the same people; living with them; working with them on ranches, in mines, in mean city apartments—wherever I could find my three squares. And, up to the last five years they hadn't changed much in all that time.

What was happening in the outside world? They didn't know. They took what was handed to them, and if it was a raw deal, which it generally was, they felt a little bewildered, but tried to make the best of it.

Once President Hoover wrote his impression of them.

"The crowd," said he, "only feels; it has no mind of its own which can plan. The crowd is credulous. It destroys, it consumes, it hates and it dreams; but it never builds."

That wasn't a very American way to feel about people, nor even a very humane way. But I suspect that Mr. Hoover was sincere in his belief that that was the right way to feel about the masses, judging by their acts. And it certainly was the way most rich, powerful persons did feel.

But they're not going to feel that way much longer! For something has happened that will throw a monkey wrench into all such smug and snooty theories.

THE RADIO HAS HAPPENED—AND THE CROWD IS NEITHER CREDULOUS NOR IGNORANT ANY LONGER.

Everywhere you can see the change, in the places where changes never came before.

There was a young mountaineer, a gaunt, lanky youngster, ragged and undernourished. He'd come down from some poor little clearing 20 miles away to do a little marketing. A hollow-eyed, flat-breasted girl; five barefoot, half-starved youngsters, and a couple of flea-bitten "houn' dogs" stood staring, behind him, as he talked. There weren't many words. His cracked blue lips moved slowly in the clay pallor of his face. Only the deep eyes burned—hostile, determined.

"Time's come, ma'am, when they can't put things over on us the way they useta. None of them rich men—not any more. We'uns air wised up now. We got a radio up t'our place. Nothing much to do now; so most all day and night folks gather round and lissen in to them speeches.

"Rich folks thinks that folks like us ain't quite bright. But they're wrong. We're bright enough. Trouble with us was, we didn't know what was going on. Didn't get the hang of it. But we got it now. Every night we get it, straight, jess as if we was right there. And we know. And things is suah going to change, ma'am, now that we know."

THEY'RE WISED UP NOW.

THEY KNOW WHAT'S HAPPENING.

AND THINGS ARE GOING TO CHANGE—NOW THAT THEY KNOW.

A ragged, half-starved man talking. One hundred million half-starved men and women listen in and talking in city slums and wilderness ranches. Women and men who have been shut off, nearly all their lives, from the world of privilege and powers, by an impenetrable wall of ignorance and poverty.

And because they were shut off, because they couldn't get the facts straight, the Privileged Few thought they couldn't think, couldn't plan, couldn't act.

BUT THEY'RE WISED UP NOW.

THEY KNOW WHAT'S HAPPENING.

AND I'M TELLING YOU, P. F.—LOOK OUT!

FOR MEN LIKE THESE, AS RAGGED AS THESE, AS MAD AS THESE—ONCE MADE AMERICA. AND THEY CAN MAKE IT ALL OVER AGAIN!

Just Folks

After the Frost

The cold black frost came stalking in
And with his ruthless blade
Where most exquisite charm had been
A sorry sight he made.
The salvia, scarlet to the chin,
Stands broken and dismayed.

Now idle does it seem to talk,
Since death has claimed its own.
A dahlia by the garden walk
To pink perfection grown
Falls blasted on a blackened stalk—
Proud beauty overthrown.

The golden mantle of the oak
In tattered fragments lies
About its feet. A single stroke
And the last brave zinnia dies,
While mists of grief like forest smoke
Seem everywhere to rise.

But yesterday the ground was fair
With all the joys of fall,
Beauty abounded everywhere.
Now dead and drear is all,
Jack Frost, the garden murderer,
Stopped by to pay a call.

The Peers' Problem: Stalin's Wife

—By Claude G. Bowers—

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

WE HAVE BEEN so much concerned in recent months with American affairs that most of us have not kept pace with the happenings across the sea. An interesting proposal for the "reform" of the House of Lords in England has been made by a committee headed by the Marquess of Salisbury. It is frankly advanced on the ground that there is a possibility of a strong Socialist government coming into power, and that the peers should so strengthen their position in the public esteem that they can, without danger, kill any Socialist program that may be presented.

It is proposed to reduce the membership of the House of Lords from 759 to 320. This should not cause any mental anguish in the more than four hundred who would be deprived of seats, since only a small proportion of the peers attend to their parliamentary duties anyway.

More interesting is the plan for choosing 150 members from among the peers by the selection of the peers themselves. They will elect their representatives, just as the people elect theirs to the Commons.

Another 150 would be chosen by county councils from among the peers who seem qualified for the work of statesmanship.

The other twenty would be members ex-officio—such as the peers of the blood, the Archbishops and some bishops.

But, it will be noted, there is no proposal that peers shall be elected by the people. The strictly hereditary principle is to be maintained. And the reason set forth by the committee is this:

> "It would be dangerous to leave the monarchy as the only hereditary element in the Constitution."

* * *

The Peers Were Being Taunted

Reading this story of today, I recalled the efforts of Lord Roseberry, the most brilliant of the peers in two generations, to persuade his fellows in the peerage to reform themselves many years ago. In his biography, by the Earl of Crew, I find the story of that attempt.

It was at the time of the Lloyd George budget in 1907, when, in anticipation of the defeat of the budget in the House of Lords after its easy passage in the Commons on the mandate of the people, the peers were being taunted and attacked in all the speeches. It was assumed, on threats made, that in the event the budget failed in the house of the peers, the Liberal Government would go to the people for the power to take away from the upper chamber the right of veto. While opposed to the budget, and convinced, from his viewpoint, that it was Socialistic, Roseberry did not vote against it and warned his fellow lords that their action would mean a tremendous attack upon their house. And so it turned out.

* * *

Roseberry Proposed a Plan of Reform

Many years before, a full generation, Roseberry had urged that the peers reform themselves as a protection against their ultimate destruction.

He even then had foreseen the situation that developed in 1907. He was sure there was plenty to reform in the House of Lords and was positive that unless the peers did the reforming, their enemies would, and that the result would be bad. But no one else among the peers had been alarmed.

Twenty years later, vindicated by events, Roseberry renewed his attempt. For some years the question of the position of the hereditary chamber in the government had been permitted to sleep by the Liberals. Asquith was not keen about it. But the hue and cry had been raised in the fight on the Lloyd George budget and it was evident that something would be done. The Liberals cared nothing about the composition of the House of Lords; they were interested solely in its relation to the House of Commons. But in any contest that might ensue Roseberry felt that the composition of the Lords would have an effect on the attitude of the people at the polls. Thus he proposed a plan of reform.

* * *

The Two Plans Are Similar

The Roseberry plan proposed that the house should be composed of three elements. One was to be composed of hereditary peers chosen by themselves. Another was to consist of lords sitting by virtue of office. Another was to consist of men chosen from the outside. It will be observed that this plan, like that now pending, contemplated a limitation of the membership. The peers were to elect peers—as in the Salisbury plan. But the biographer of Roseberry does not make clear just what was meant by the selection of members "chosen from outside." It would seem to mean the introduction of non-hereditary members.

But, on the whole, the two plans are similar enough to justify the conclusion that even now, though dead, the brilliant Roseberry is leading the lords in the battle against absolute extinction. Perhaps too late.

* * *

Exceptions to the Rule

There are, and always have been, members of the peerage who inherited their places, who have been highly competent for public service and qualified in statesmanship. But these are, and always have been, exceptions to the rule. The majority have had no intelligent interest in public matters that did not affect them personally. Most of the titled statesmen with whom we have been familiar for a hundred years have earned distinction as commoners and been raised to the peerage. Disraeli is an illustration. Many, long commoners, who died as peers, never distinguished themselves after entering the House of Lords. Asquith is an illustration; and Morley and Bryce. It remains to be seen whether Snowden will ever be able to soar in the more rarified atmosphere of the more gorgeous chamber. Somehow he seems a bit out of place—like a musketeer in a drawing room.

However, notwithstanding occasional geniuses in the house of peers, it has had power out of proportion to the ability of its membership.

* * *

The Weakness of the House of Lords

But what does it matter what the lords do about themselves if the strictly Socialist government feared comes into power? If it should decide to wipe out the lords, what recourse would they have? To the people at the polls? But there would be no Socialist government unless the people at the polls so willed it. The fatal weakness of the House of Lords lies in the hereditary principle on which it rests. Ability, capacity for public service, are not inherited.

Rank Counts in Russia

Perhaps respect and reverence for station is passing out, and this is not altogether an agreeable thought. The other day in Russia the wife of Stalin, one of the most powerful rulers of the earth, died. The nation, as a nation, momentarily took no more cognizance of her passing than if she were a peasant, illiterate and unknown.

The Moscow press did not indicate in their obituaries that she was the consort of the nation's ruler. But on the day of the funeral, Soviet Russia paid its tribute to position—even rank—with a military display, with thousands in the streets, with Stalin walking behind the red hearse; and so the consort of a Soviet ruler was borne to a famous monastery where lies the first wife of Peter the Great. Yes, rank does count—in Russia.

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION

"What is meant by buying stock 'on margin'?"

By Myron L. Hoch
Department of Economics

In security speculation the buyer usually puts up a portion of the purchase price as a partial payment on the stocks, while the broker agrees to obtain credit for him for the remainder of the purchase price. This credit is provided either by the broker or through the broker's negotiating a loan from a bank in the name of the brokerage firm.

In order to secure the loan made to the buyer the broker holds the stock certificates, although the buyer holds title to the securities and is entitled to receive dividends paid on the shares. The buyer, however, pays interest on the funds which have been borrowed.

The principal risk taken by the broker when his customer buys stock on the margin is that the market value of the shares may decline below the amount put up as margin. Where there is a possibility of this occurring the broker will call for additional funds from the buyer.

In the event that this is not forthcoming the broker will sell the shares at the market price, in order to protect his own interest.
